Senate's Foes Of Office Bill Face Defeat On Patronage

Wheeler Amendment to Give Congress a Vote Virtually Doomed.

New Deal 'Trades' Charged on Floor

Action Delayed After Row Over 'Pressure' by Administration.

By Robert C. Albright.

Defeat of the Wheeler amendment to force a Congressional vote on the President's consolidation orders last night was virtually conceded by leaders in the Senate fight on the Government reorganization bill.

A vote on the focal provision of the bill was delayed after a day ringing with new charges of Administration "trading" for support of the bill. WPA "pressure," promises of flood control projects and assurances that neither the Forest Service nor the Reclamation Bureau would be disturbed, were charged in the drive for defeat of the amendment.

"I'm afraid we will lose now by a few votes," Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, told reporters. Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, chief opponent of the Administration's bill, echoed the Montanan's pessimism. Three days ago both were confident the amendment would be approved.

Lobbying Charged.

On the floor, Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, declared at least four Senators had switched to opposition of the amendment because of "assurances" made them. He charged active "lobbying" for the bill by James Roosevelt, son of the President and one of Mr. Roosevelt's secretaries, and declared department officials were "button-holing" Senators. Holt challenged the Senate Lobby Committee to "investigate the Administration lobby." Then he asserted it would never do so, "because it is chiefly an instrument to blackjack public opinion."

Meanwhile, Chairman Sherman Minton, of the Senate Lobby Committee, announced that two witnesses, including the secretary of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, had been subpenaed to appear before his group this morning. They will be asked what they know about lobbying against the Administration's reorganization bill.

Wants to Quiz "Crown Prince."

"I would like to have the Lobby Committee tell Lieut. Col. James (Jimmy) Crown Prince Roosevelt to come here and explain why he is lobbying for this bill," Senator Holt told the Senate. He said young Roosevelt should be asked "about those luncheons, where he tells what 'we' want."

Several Senators told the Senate Wednesday they had received "assurances" from high quarters that the Forest Service would not be disturbed in the reorganization shake-up. They declined to say who gave them the assurances.

Roosevelt Tells I. C. C. to Frame Rail Program

President Roosevelt yesterday directed three members of the Interstate Commerce Commission to prepare for submission to him within a week recommendations for dealing with the "critical" railroad situation. Mr. Roosevelt took this action at the end of his second conference within the week with 14 railroad experts.

Chairman W. M. W. Splawn, Charles D. Mahaffie and Joseph B. Eastman, of the ICC, were given this task. In announcing the President's action, White House Secretary Stephen T. Early asserted that Mr. Roosevelt directed the trio to bring to him by next Thursday "complete, definite and factual recommendations for immediate action by Congress in regard to the whole railroad situation, which is critical."

There were indications that foremost among the recommendations would be a proposal designed to expedite the reorganization of railroads now in bankruptcy, constituting about 30 per cent of the country's railroad mileage. At present one-third of the holders of any class of security can delay or pre-

Miami Beach, March 17 (U.P.).—The world premiere of a motion picture was reflected into a little mirror above Fred Snite's "iron lung" tonight, and later the curly-haired, 27-year-old infantile paralysis victim got "the biggest thrill of my life" when the star of the movie telephoned him from Tucson, Ariz. The picture was "Her Jungle Love," starring Dorothy Lamour, who later telephoned young Snite.

18 Women Held In Police Drive On Vice Menace

Businessmen Complain Soliciting on Streets Hurts Trade.

Precipitated by protests from the Federation of Business Men's Associations and by individual complaints from "about 15 men in the last two weeks," District police last night started to clean the city of "a strongly organized street-walking racket."

Eighteen women were taken to headquarters and held for questioning. The 15 men who entered complaints of having been robbed by members of the street-walking profession will try to identify the offenders.

Business Declared Hurt.

As the raids were being made in various parts of the city, the federation was in monthly meeting at the Hamilton Hotel protesting strongly against the serious damage it claims tax-paying business is suffering from street-walkers in numerous areas, particularly the Northwest.

In some parts of the city, it was declared, businessmen had to close down their shops at night, although many of them formerly had made enough night sales to "run their business."

J. G. Feldman, a federation member, was authorized to continue work in behalf of strengthened vagrancy laws—which would carry jail sentences rather than fines.

Ticks, Unfed for 7 Years, Give Relapsing Fever to a Monkey

By Gerald G. Gross

A monkey at the National Institute of Health has relapsing fever and Dr. Edward Francis' respect for a certain 8-legged bug has gone still higher.

The kindly germ detective, himself only recently recovered from the baffling disease, yesterday fondly inspected the colony of ticks which are not merely alive but still dangerous after going for nearly 7 years without food.

Returning to his laboratory March 1 for the first time since June, first thing Dr. Francis did was put seven of his ticks to the monkey. Eight days later the animal began running a fever. Its temperature stayed up two days then returned to normal.

Last Monday and Tuesday there was another relapse—that is how the disease gets its name—but yesterday Jocko's temperature was normal and he was his same jolly self. His next relapse is expected over this week-end.

And Dr. Francis, along with his associates at the research center of the U. S. Public Health Service, continues to marvel that a batch of little blue-gray insects which have been starved in tiny pine boxes since they were shipped here from Texas in 1931 can still pack a wallop in their bite.

He revealed yesterday an interesting and scientifically im-

FHA Breaks Loan Record; Upturn Seen

Insurance Requests for Single Week Surge to $20,000,000.

Chief of Agency Claims Housing Is Defeating the Recession.

By the Associated Press.

Stewart McDonald, head of the Federal Housing Administration, told a conference of real estate men yesterday all previous administration records were broken last week with more than $20,000,000 in mortgages submitted for FHA insurance.

"And," he commented, "some say we are having a depression."

"New regulations governing the new amendments concerning Federal housing went into effect February 12," McDonald said.

Steady Upturn Noted.

"From that moment there has been a steady and sharp upturn until at the end of this past week we shattered all previous records with . . . an increase of over 40 per cent over the corresponding week of March, 1937."

McDonald said this business had been widespread, with the largest pick-up on the Pacific Coast.

He told the real estate men, who are representatives of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, that the FHA now was able to offer a better bargain to home builders than in the whole history of the country. He said the advantages offered by the administration were looked upon as a great hope of pulling the country at of the recession.

Plans for Farm Areas.

McDonald disclosed that FHA was studying plans to cover the "new and heretofore untouched fields" in farm areas.

Joseph W. Catharine, president of the association, urged the delegates to "have courage and vision in America, and I'm sure we are marching on to a better day."

About 200 delegates attended the opening session of the three-day conference.

President Roosevelt approved Housing Authority contracts yesterday with Austin, Tex.; Charleston, S. C.; New Orleans, La.; Syracuse, N. Y., and Youngstown, Ohio, for $16,836,000 of slum-clearance and low-cost housing loans.

Administrator Nathan Straus said Austin would get a loan of $643,000; Charleston, $1,017,000; New Orleans, $8,411,000; Syracuse, $3,930,000, and Youngstown, $2,835,000.

Drastic Changes Are Adopted by Stock Exchange

New York, March 17 (A.P.).—The New York Stock Exchange today adopted a drastically revised constitution which provides for far-reaching changes in administrative policy, including the appointment of a salaried president with almost dictatorial powers.

An overwhelming vote—1,013 out of a membership of 1,375—was cast for reform.

Under the new setup the exchange will discard methods of management which endured for half a century. Provision is made for a new governing committee of 32 members to supplant the present committee of 50. The new body will have 12 nonmembers of the exchange and some representatives of the public. The present governing committee is composed entirely of members.

New York, March 17 (A.P.).—The board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange tonight expelled Richard Whitney, its former president, who has pleaded guilty to two grand larceny indictments involving sums totaling more than $200,000. Whitney's partners, Edwin D. Morgan, jr., and Henry D. Mygatt, were suspended for three years each.

U. S. to Arm For Decency, Hull Asserts

Attack on 'Barbarism' Is Broadcast to World in 6 Languages.

America Must Act With Nations of the Same Interests, He Says.

Mr. Hull's Text—Page 18.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Secretary of State Hull yesterday served notice on the world that the United States does not propose to abandon its fight for international decency but on the contrary will arm itself to command proper respect for its legitimate rights and interests—"the surrender of which would constitute abandonment of the fundamental principles of justice and morality and peace among nations."

The Secretary of State made this declaration of American foreign policy in a luncheon address at the National Press Club which was carried around the world by radio network and short wave broadcasts—in German, Spanish, French, Italian and Portugese as well as English.

Hull Avoids Names.

The hour chosen for this carefully prepared address indicated Hull was more anxious to have his views widely heard in Europe than in this country.

Hull did not mention any nation by name, but against the background of what happened in Europe during the last week it was clear that his denunciation of "international anarchy," of "barbarism" and of treaty violators was directed at Adolf Hitler and the Japanese militarists.

Indeed, the Secretary asserted that "the catastrophic developments of recent years, the startling events of the last weeks, offer a tragic demonstration of how quickly the contagious scourge of treaty-breaking and armed violence spreads from one region to another."

Assails Treaty Breakers.

The essence of Hull's declaration was that the dictators and treaty-violators could expect no sympathy from this Government, which he placed in the position of doing everything, singly or in co-operation with other nations, in a peaceful, practicable way, to force an observance of fundamental principles of justice, right, morality, and decency among nations.

In defining this Nation's affirmative foreign policy, Secretary Hull struck a middle of the road course, asserting that "we are fully determined to avoid the extremes

Man Who Admits Slaying 2 Women Plunges 3 Floors

Buffalo, N. Y., March 17 (A.P.).—Detective Chief John J. Whalen today said Peter Burton, Detroit electrician, confessed strangling two Detroit women to death.

Burton confessed as he lay in critical condition in a hospital, after leaping from a third floor window of police headquarters, Whalen said.

Burton told him he quarreled with his former wife, Mrs. Monica Jannonis, 40, after trying to make up with her, that he attacked her, and that he was surprised by Mrs. Ursula Jakubowski, 53 a landlady.

Burton strangled the landlady with a bathroom towel and then garroted his wife with a wire.

Bombs Kill 600.

By the Associated Press.

Barcelona, March 17.—Relentless insurgent bombers struck at Barcelona again tonight in the tenth of a series of raids which already had taken 600 lives within 24 hours.

The planes dropped about 20 bombs on a section of this refugee-packed capital which had not been hit in raids earlier today. Casualties were reported heavy.

At almost the same time other insurgent planes bombed the cities of Tarragona and San Vincente on the Catalan coast, inflicting heavy casualties.

The war ministry reported officially that 600 had been killed and 400 wounded in today's raids on Barcelona, but it was explained that the fatalities listed included only bodies removed from debris in this greatest industrial city of Spain.

Wave on wave of insurgent bombers roared over Barcelona nine times in 16 hours, raining bombs on this Mediterranean seaport.

It was the worst air attack inflicted on Barcelona in the 20-month civil war.

Tons of shattered masonry and debris hid the exact death toll.

The United States Embassy's temporary quarters were damaged. A bomb landing nearby blew out the embassy windows, but the only occupant, Col. Stephen O. Fuqua, American Military Attache, was unhurt.

Hundreds of wounded were trapped in shattered buildings. Rescue workers dug for hours to save the wounded and recover the dead.

Soviet Invites World to Help Halt Aggressors

Litvinoff Calls First Press Conference in 8 Years to Announce Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, March 17.—Soviet Russia today invited world powers to consider joint action against aggressor nations and to prevent "a new world massacre."

Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, indicated Germany, Italy and Japan would be ignored when the Russian proposal is offered to various capitals, including Washington.

Litvinoff, disclosing the plan at one of his rare press conferences, did not arrange a conference. He said one would be held if it appeared the powers were ready to do something.

He emphasized that all nations, not only European, were menaced by 'aggressors' threats to peace, and all faced the "responsibilities for the destinies of the peoples of Europe, and not only of Europe."

Litvinoff said he was urging powers, including the United States, to discuss joint action to protect Czechoslovakia.

100,000 Ask War.

By the United Press.

Warsaw, March 18.—Poland has served an ultimatum on Lithuania.

Announcement of the action was made by the Polish government shortly after midnight.

The announcement revealed that the ultimatum was served at about the time (9 o'clock last night) that almost 100,000 persons shouting "lead us to Kovno!" marched on the home of Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, virtual dictator of Poland, and demanded that warlike measures be taken to wipe out the frontier separating Poland from Lithuania.

It was reported that the ultimatum was accompanied by a 48-hour time limit.

The time limit was set by Poland, it was said, because she feels that the present European tension offers an exclusive opportunity to obtain seaports and a guarantee in the Memel territory in exchange for a return of the "Polish corridor" to Germany.

The French government was worried, it was added, and was exerting its diplomatic efforts because of her mutual assistance agreements with Soviet Russia and Poland. The Soviet government was represented as considering the move a direct threat to Russia's Baltic position.

"We will march to Kovno and Memel," shouted the Poles, who a half hour before had been stirred to a high pitch of anger by a speech by Gen. Jan Gorecki, head of the Polish War Veterans Association.

His speech bitterly condemned Lithuania.

Poland and Lithuania appeared to be at the crossroads of peace and armed conflict when it was announced officially last night.

Bones Found in Va. Called Part Of 3,000,000-Year-Old Whale

By the Associated Press.

Hustle, Va., March 17.—Paleontologists from the Smithsonian Institution today viewed vertebrae and the skull of an ancient mammal unearthed on a farm near here and said the bones were those of a cetothere, a 3,000,000-year-old whale.

The 8-foot-long head was uncovered by diggers employed by Barbee Spindle, jr., Hustle postmaster, who dug up the first bones in a creek bed on his mother's farm last week. Since then other parts have been found. The head was uncovered only today.

The Smithsonian representatives —Dr. C. W. Gilmore and Dr. A. Remington Kellogg—in identifying the bones, disagreed with Dr. J. W. Bailey, professor of paleontology at the University of Richmond, who believed they were the bones of a zeuglodon, also a prehistoric sea mammal.

Dr. Kellogg and Dr. Gilmore said they have a cetothere at the institution, borrowed from a State museum in Pennsylvania. The borrowed bones were found in the easterly part of Maryland. Eight vertebrae, however, were missing. The cetothere was toothless.

The Smithsonian representatives took samples of the sea shells in the nearby deposits. They will try to determine the accurate age of the bones.

Witnesses Back Senate Plan to Reduce Surtax

Chairman Strengthens His Stand by Questioning Business Experts.

Business tax witnesses yesterday lined up solidly behind Senate Finance Committee proposals to slash upper income surtax rates and impose flat rates on corporate income and capital gains, as Senate hearings opened on the House tax bill.

Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Committee, backed up recent proposals, for these tax reforms by carefully questioning each of a long line of witnesses appearing before his group. He drew almost unanimous approval.

Earlier, Undersecretary of the Treasury Roswell Magill, estimated a cut to 60 per cent in the present maximum 75 per cent income surtax on individual earnings over $5,000,000 would cost the Treasury approximately $20,000,000 annually in revenue.

But L. H. Parker, expert for the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue, estimated the income surtax reduction would cause a revenue loss of "much less" than $20,000,000.

Diminishing Returns.

Harrison has argued from the outset that upper surtax rates have reached the point of diminishing returns, stifling private enterprise and reducing Federal revenues.

Meanwhile, Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr., (Republican), of Wisconsin, is pressing his proposal for broadening the income tax base by lowering single income tax exemptions from $1,000 to $800, and cutting exemptions of married persons from $2,500 to $2,000.

Henry H. Heimann, of the National Association of Credit Men, told the committee he not only believed the income tax base should be broadened to reach more taxpayers and bring in more revenue, but recommended every person receiving more than $500 file an income tax return.

Must File Tax.

"Those making as little as $500 needn't necessarily pay a tax," Heimann said. "But they should be required to file a return and possibly pay a filing fee of about $0 cents."

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, at the opposite end of the political see-saw from Senator La Follette, told reporters he also favored broadening the income tax base, but Harrison has remained noncommittal on this point.

Profits Tax Opposed.

A majority of the Senate Finance Committee already has indicated its intention of voting to remove the last vestige of the 1936 undivided profits tax principle remaining in the House tax bill. If it also votes to lower the high individual surtax rates imposed in the 1935 "share the wealth" tax bill, a blow will have been struck at two of the principle tax reforms enacted by this Administration.

First witness before the committee yesterday was R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the Association of American Railroads. Fletcher said the undistributed profits tax has been a heavy burden on railroads struggling for survival, and has particularly hit railroads in bankruptcy.

"If a flat tax on corporate income were imposed instead, would that eliminate your objections?" asked Harrison.

Flat Tax Favored.

"Absolutely," said Fletcher. "Our association is in favor of a flat tax."

Fletcher also asked revision of the capital stock tax to aid railroads in bankruptcy.

Heimann, of the National Association of Credit Men, who followed Fletcher on the witness stand, told the committee the House tax bill is a distinct improvement over the present law, but he opposed continuation of the undivided profits tax in any form. He called it a "dangerous principle." Heimann agreed with Chairman Harrison that a 15 per cent flat tax on capital gains "would produce more revenue and encourage business."

Comstock Testifies.

A. Barr Comstock, of Comstock & Wescott, Inc., Boston, Mass., who participated in the recent small business conferences here, urged the committee to "wipe out" the undivided profits tax and the proposed so-called "1-E" tax on closely held corporations. He said section 102 of the present law could be lightened to prevent accumulation of "unreasonable surpluses."

Comstock, who said his concern developed the "Technicolor" colored movie process, asked that special treatment be given scientific research firms of the type with which he is associated. He protested that as a "special service" company his firm is classed in the tax laws with "tax evaders and the loophole people." Comstock said his company could be forced to pay a tax of 109 per cent under present laws.

As March 15 income-tax returns continued to flow into the Treasury, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday expressed "satisfaction" with the results. In the first 15 days of March the Treasury collected $615,947,718 in income taxes, an increase of 18 per cent over the same period last year, and a gain over Treasury estimates. Last year income-tax revenue dropped $115,000,000 below estimates. Treasury officials attributed this year's record-breaking increase to the robust condition of business in the first eight months of 1937.

Working for Washington

MILTON R. VOLLMER.

Lawyer Is Secretary of Georgia Avenue Group and of Federation of Businessmen's Associations Here.

By Christine Sadler

Milton R. Vollmer probably has written more pages of business history than any other Washingtonian. He keeps minutes for the Federation of Business Men's Associations, and also for the Georgia Avenue Business Men's Association.

As if that were not enough minute-writing, he also is secretary of the Universalist National Memorial Church.

Vollmer was one of the organizers of the Business Men's Federation and has been secretary since its first year. He attended the organization meeting as a delegate from the Georgia Avenue group, which he helped start in 1928 and of which he was the first president.

Cruising His Sport.

After he had been president of the avenue association for three terms, the members "promoted" him to the role of secretary—and there he has been ever since.

Next to making him secretary, organizations love to get him on their board of directors. He's a Federation director, one of the board of managers of his church, and a director of the Lions Club recently organized in the Columbia Heights area.

When the minute-taking and board meeting seasons are over, Vollmer likes nothing better than to board a boat and go cruising. The bigger the boat and the longer the cruise the better. Just now he is most interested in Mexico and South America; but Bermuda, Florida, Havana—any place one can go on a boat—is a satisfactory destination.

Graduate of G. W. U.

Vollmer's real job is being a lawyer. He has been engaged in general practice here since 1924. He is a graduate of George Washington University, Washington Business College, and Emerson Institute. Before entering the legal profession he worked for the Government as assistant chief of a division in the Census Bureau.

A native and life-long resident of the District of Columbia, he is strongly in favor of complete suffrage for his home city. The arguments between local suffrage exponents on one hand and national representation on the other leave him unenthusiastic. If democracy cannot work out on a full-voting basis here, with statistics proving the high intelligence level of the residents, he wonders how it works out elsewhere in America.

"What gets me the most about the situation is that they must go outside the District to get men to fill jobs here, when the District has plenty of competent men within its boundaries. That our jobs should be distributed on a patronage basis in which we have no say strikes me as being a very bad situation," he said.

Although Vollmer and his Federation have fought the business privilege tax since its beginning, he personally would prefer a modified tax of its nature to an income tax—and a sales tax to either.

Vollmer a Mason.

Vollmer is one of the District's outstanding Masons. He is a member of Stansbury Lodge and a past high priest of the Brightwood Chapter. He also takes an active part in work of the Board of Trade, being on the law and legislation, traffic, streets and highways committees of that organization.

He is a member of the Fort Stephens Post of the American Legion, is unmarried and lives at 1316 Webster street northeast. Quiet and unassuming, he has a keen sense of humor and the ability to enjoy working with all types of persons. Into his numerous civic activities he puts the same energy and orderly habits of work he gives to his own business. It's no wonder groups keep electing him secretary.

On Monday—J Nelson Anderson, general counsel for the Federation of Business Men's Associations, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Lewis Wants 3 Billion Voted To Aid Jobless

C. I. O. Head Warns Congress That 13,000,000 Idle Are a Threat.

By the United Press.

John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, warned Congress last night that the 13,000,000 jobless workers in America are a "profound threat" to the Nation's stability and called for a $3,000,000,000 relief appropriation.

He wrote Chairman Edward T. Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, of the House Appropriations Committee, that sufficient money must be appropriated to provide a minimum of 3,500,000 jobs during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Relief Up to United States.

"The C. I. O. is convinced that vigorous measures must be taken by the Government to keep these unemployed from being cast out of our productive economy," Lewis said. "It has been one of the primary purposes of the C. I. O. to promote employment in private industry.

"But when private industry cannot take care of American workers, then the Federal Government must assume the responsibility which it has announced it would accept—to provide jobs for unemployed who are able to work."

Earlier, F. M. Rarig, jr., St. Paul, Minn., executive secretary of the Ramsey County Welfare Board, told the Senate Unemployment Committee the Works Progress Administration program is about "twice as expensive as direct" relief. He doubted that local communities could make a 25 per cent contribution toward work projects.

Tax Burden Called Heavy.

Chairman Herman A. Gray, of the New York Unemployment Insurance Advisory Council, urged a thorough overhauling of the present unemployment insurance system to obtain maximum benefits, arguing that the taxation burden on employers is "unnecessarily heavy and expensive."

In the House, a meeting of Pennsylvania Congressmen, called by C. I. O. leaders to discuss means of expediting wage-hour legislation, adjourned in turmoil after an American Federation of Labor representative, arising unexpectedly, demanded his organization's bill "or nothing."

The gathering was convoked to demand wage-hour legislation that would halt the exodus of Pennsylvania industries to the South because of cheaper labor.

James Miles, the A. F. of L. representative, interrupted the discussion to demand the Federation's bill for a 40 cent per hour minimum wage and a 40 hour maximum work week.

"I represent William Green although, of course, I am here in bad company," he shouted, glaring at the C. I. O.-ers.

Miles was invited to the meeting by representative Michael W. Stack, (Democrat), Pennsylvania, supporter of the Federation bill.

The Gallup Poll

Voters Favoring Full Payment of War Debts Outnumbered by Revisionists.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, March 17.—A significant change in public sentiment regarding the war debts—a change which may prove to be an opening wedge in settling the 20-year-old issue—is revealed in a new survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion. Today, for the first time, the majority of voters reached favor reducing or canceling the sums owed the United States by European countries, instead of trying to collect in full.

George Gallup

The shift in sentiment has taken place during the last year, for in February, 1937, the Institute found the majority of voters were in favor of holding our foreign creditors to full payment.

The present attitude of the public is important politically because while economic experts have long favored some sort of debt settlement, politicians have been afraid to make any move that might antagonize public opinion. The realignment of sentiment, as shown in the survey, may give them courage to work out a new program for liquidating the debts at less than face value.

The Institute used identical questions in its surveys of a year ago and today. The questions read:

"What is your opinion regarding the war debts owed this country? Should we continue to try to collect in full, or should they be reduced to a point where at least something might be collected, or should they be canceled and forgotten?"

The following comparison of the vote in 1937 and today shows the trend.

	Year ago	Today	Change
For collection in full	54%	47%	—7
For reduction	37	42	+5
For cancellation	9	11	+2

Note that whereas voters favoring full collection were in the majority in 1937, they are outnumbered today by those favoring reduction and cancellation.

Hungary Offered Settlement.

A move toward debt settlement was made last month by Hungary on a loan which she contracted after the World War. Hungary offered to pay the face value if the United States would cancel all interest. The offer was taken under consideration by the Treasury, but a special act of Congress would be needed to give it effect. While Congressmen recognized the Hungarian loan was not a war debt, but a post-war debt, many feared that settlement on Hungary's terms would set a precedent for countries seeking similar liquidation of their war debts.

The fact that no change in war debts may be made without the approval of Congress emphasizes the importance of knowing the attitude of the Nation's voters on this issue.

Contracts Call for Gold.

Many economists point out that an obstacle to debt settlement is the stipulation in the original contracts that payment must be made in gold—a commodity which the United States already has more of than she needs. Some experts say that an arrangement for payments in goods or trade might be worked out if tariff barriers did not stand in the way. In that connection it is interesting to note that reduction of tariffs through Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade agreements was favored by a large majority in an Institute survey reported earlier this week.

Voters Give Reason.

The most typical reason given by voters for believing that the war debts should be scaled down is that "half a loaf is better than none." Those who favor cancellation say that the United States will never be able to collect anything on the debts anyway.

Hosford Blames 'Lying Politicians'

By the United Press.

Chairman Charles F. Hosford, of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, last night blamed "disgruntled politicians" for circulating "false reports" that he had been forced to resign because of pressure from Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), Pensylvania, and Director John L. Lewis, of the Committee for Industrial Organization. In fact, both urged him to keep the post, he said.

Hosford said neither had made any demands on him regarding the work of the commission, and that he resigned solely because of "the necessity for devoting more time to my personal affairs."

He pointed out that both men were warm supporters of the Federal coal regulation program, that he had often sought their advice on important matters, and that he had intended to ignore the "pressure reports" until they became so prevalent.

McNary Foe in Field.

Portland, Oreg., March 17 (AP).—Willis E. Mahoney announced his candidacy today for the Democratic nomination as United States Senator. Charles L. McNary, Republican leader in the Senate, defeated Mahoney in 1936 by fewer than 5,500 votes.

U. S. Oystermen Ask End of Duties

By the Associated Press.

The oyster industry yesterday asked elimination of duties imposed on its products by Great Britain.

Howard W. Beach, of New Haven, Conn., told the Committee for Reciprocity Information oysters produced in this country did not compete with those of England because they were of a different variety.

Arthur Besse, president of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, challenged the right of the committee to consider tariff reductions on woolen goods in the proposed trade pact.

TVA Directors Go Again Today To White House

Further Details of Their Fight Will Be Laid Before Roosevelt.

By the United Press.

Feuding directors of the $400,000,000 Tennessee Valley Authority go to the White House again today to air further details of their fight, which has made a Congressional investigation almost certain.

The conference is expected to be much like the first. The President demanded facts, not opinions. He got them from the Damon and Pythias of the Warring Triumvirate—David E. Lilienthal and Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan—but their colleague—Chairman Arthur E. Morgan—told the Chief Executive his inquiry was a waste of time.

Observers believe that if the chairman persists in this attitude today he will be asked to quit. Mr. Roosevelt gave him and the other directors an ultimatum last Friday. He told them to prove their charges of malfeasance, maladministration and jealousy, or resign.

Confers With Counsel.

The President conferred yesterday with James Lawrence Fly, TVA general counsel, presumably on matters pertinent to his investigation, and on facts brought out in discussions between Lilienthal and Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, for purchase of the latter's Southeastern utilities. Willkie, who has fought the TVA power program for five years, giving up only when the Supreme Court ruled against him, says he and Lilienthal can make a deal if they get together on valuation costs.

Evidence that Lilienthal and Willkie made progress came yesterday from Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes, who said he would not interfere with the negotiations. He had insisted previously on carrying out the PWA's $150,000,000 financial assistance program to towns in the TVA area desiring to build their own power plants.

To Give Them Free Hand.

He said that now he would not insist that the municipalities go ahead with their construction work, but would let them decide whether they wanted to proceed, with the possibility that their plants might duplicate facilities which are now Willkie's, but would belong to TVA if the latter purchased them.

Congressional leaders reiterated that an inquiry of the TVA quarrel would be delayed until they saw what Mr. Roosevelt's efforts turned up.

U. S. Court of Appeals for Administration Is Proposed in Bill by Senator Logan.

A court to hear appeals from rulings and orders of the Board of Tax Appeals, Federal Trade Commission, Interstate Commerce Commission and similar Government organizations would be established under a bill introduced by Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky.

The court would be known as the United States Court of Appeals for Administration, and would sit in the District of Columbia except when circumstances required that it sit elsewhere. A chief justice and 10 associates appointed by the President for life or during good behavior would compose the court, with salaries of $12,500 annually. The court's rulings would be subject to review only by the United States Supreme Court.

House Rejects Arms Parley, Cut in Navy Bill

Rayburn Warns Nation May Have to Spend Still More Later.

By the United Press.

The House last night turned thumbs down on a international disarmament conference after advocates of the super-Navy scored an easy victory in the first major test on the $1,000,000,000 naval expansion program.

An amendment by Representative Henry C. Luckey (Democrat), of Nebraska, to call an arms limitation conference among signatories of the 1922 Washington Treaty was rejected, 74 to 29. The House had defeated an amendment by Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, to strike out an authorization for three superdreadnaughts.

The Luckey amendment proposed that construction of the 46 fighting vessels and 22 auxiliary craft be held up pending a conference.

Previously, Majority Leader Sam Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, warned that before next January Congress may be called upon to vote defense appropriations even greater than the pending $1,121,000,000 Navy bill "to let the world know that we are prepared to defend ourselves."

Rayburn declared the President's program must be approved to prevent possibility of an alien power gaining a foothold in Central or South America.

When the House completed consideration of the bill for the day it had tentatively approved vital provisions authorizing the increase requested by the President.

Debate today is expected to center around the "policy section," which would commit the United States to construction of a fleet powerful enough to defend both coasts simultaneously, carry out all national policies and protect American commerce and citizens abroad.

Hazen, in Florida, Approves Cherry Blossom Festival

Basking in the Florida sun, where he is enjoying his first vacation since entering office, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen placed the official blessings yesterday on the 1938 edition of the Cherry Blossom Festival.

In the meantime, National Capital Parks experts said the blossoms might come as late as April 20. In previous years, however, the blossoms have appeared as early as March 20.

Melvin Sharpe, assistant to the president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., was nominated by Hazen to serve as general chairman of the festival committee.

Loyalists Beg U. S. to Allow Sale of Arms

Envoy Asks Relaxation of Neutrality Law to Make War 'Even.'

The United States has been asked by the Spanish Ambassador Don Fernando de los Rios to relax the restrictions of its neutrality act to permit the Spanish loyalist government to purchase arms and ammunition to meet "the aggressor nations" on an equal basis, the Spanish Embassy announced yesterday.

Don Fernando de los Rios, appearing tired and worn after all-day conferences with Barcelona, which was battered and blasted by repeated air raids yesterday, asserted that he was making a public appeal for the right of his government to purchase arms from other nations.

"This is a right which aggressor nations attacking loyalist Spain already have," he said, as he sat in the patio once the domain of the ambassadors of empires dominated by Bourbon kings.

Appeal Made Repeatedly.

This appeal, Dr. de los Rios indicated in response to questioning, has been made repeatedly to the Government of the United States, but the Ambassador would not disclose what action he had taken in this respect.

"I have repeatedly informed your Government of what my government thought was its rights, and that is all I can say now," he asserted.

The Spanish Ambassador, once president of the University of Madrid, received representatives of the press in the Embassy. Once, during his conference, he was interrupted by a call from Barcelona, where, he was told, thousands of his countrymen had been killed.

These calls, he explained, were concerning members of his family, who were in the blood-stained city.

"The Spanish civil war is no longer a civil war," said Dr. de los Rios.

Demands Right for Spain.

"It has become international in scope."

Spain must cease to be the only country to whom the purchase of arms is forbidden, Dr. de los Rios said. "Germany and Italy and even Japan and China have this right. But we alone do not have it."

"We ask simply the rights essential to every recognized and sovereign people," he asserted.

"These should not be denied loyalist Spain in this critical moment of her existence."

"The military situation of the Spanish Government troops would be no more serious—or even as serious—as in other periods of our 20-month struggle, were it not for the international struggle," he asserted.

Assails Hitler, Duce.

"What Germany and Italy are accomplishing in Spain together is one phase of the program which Hitler outlined in his speech of February 20, and which Mussolini undoubtedly foretold when he announced that March would be a transcendal month.

"All of this reveals the will of the two leaders, which, with the support of certain groups within other countries, guides nations as if they were puppets—and now all of Europe has become the victim of their puppet policies.

"And tomorrow, where will this puppet policy spread?"

Shows Films of War.

Dr. de los Rios conducted perhaps the most dramatic press conference in the history of the Spanish Embassy. He received his guests for the first showing in Washington of the Robert Capra pictures of the civil war, doctrines of the struggle in Spain.

But a few minutes before the formal exhibitions of the pictures was opened, word had come that Barcelona, the rich "New York of Spain," with its million population, had been bombed.

"Spain will fight to the last gun carriage, to the last soldier, to the last woman and child," said the quiet man who presided in tducational circles under King Alfonso.

Bombers may kill noncombatants and raze buildings, but they cannot destroy the morale of a people fighting for their lives and their liberties, Dr. de los Rios said.

Conquest of Spain by the Moors, the Germans and the Italians is unthinkable so long as "loyalist Spaniards breathe," the Ambassador added.

To Continue Battle.

"We are the one nation in the world which is snarling at autocracy and dictatorships," he said. "And, until we are all dead, we shall continue to do so."

Dr. de los Rios' conversations with Barcelona revealed yesterday that despite the carnage in the cafes, hotels, schools, apartments and shopping districts, life was going on as usual in the provisional capital.

So dense was the cheering throng that mounted Cossacks were unable to push through it. The Papanin party was rescued from an ice floe February 19.

Noted Tenor May Run For Irish Presidency

Hollywood, Calif., March 17 (AP). John McCormack, noted tenor, announced tonight he was considering standing for the presidency of his native Ireland.

"I have not had any official invitation," said McCormack, "but so very many of my friends in Ireland have written me to throw my hat in the ring, I cabled my son in Dublin to find out if I am eligible for the position under the new constitution."

Spanish Envoy Upbraids Dictators.

Franco Planes Slaughter 600, Renew Raids Upon Barcelona

Spain

Thousands poured into the subways planning to spend the night.

One raid took place at noon when the center of Barcelona was teeming with workers going home to lunch. Many victims were caught at a subway entrance.

Twelve workers were killed when a shoe factory was hit. Buildings five and six stories high caved in under the terrific assault. Nearly every section—Barcelona's center, the working class district, and the new residential area—felt the fury of the attack.

Morale Strong.

The Spanish capital — already threatened with severance from the rest of Spain by the insurgent advance along Catalonia's southern border—took the raids bravely.

Catalans and other Spaniards, among them many who fled insurgent occupation of their native provinces, soon strolled along Barcelona's boulevards as the acrid smoke rolled away revealing the raid damage.

Women hung over balconies to watch rescue work. Little knots of people gathered near piles of stone and plaster discussing neighborhood tragedies.

But from inside shuttered windows could be heard the undertone of weeping Spanish women and sobbing children.

The silence that followed the roar of bombs was cut by guards' whistles shrilling for ambulances and the noise of fire-fighting apparatus.

The seat of Spain's principal manufactures and the largest seaport, Barcelona is one of the greatest prizes still outside the grasp of Franco's forces.

It became the temporary capital of government Spain when insurgents drew their lines close to Madrid and threatened Valencia, the first temporary capital.

Reports from Castellon, 40 miles north of Valencia, said the Czechoslovakian Consulate was destroyed in an insurgent raid yesterday.

At the coastal city of Vinaroz the French Consul, Jose Ramos Delmas, was reported killed. No further details of the attacks were learned in Barcelona.

U. S. Officials Move.

United States Embassy officials in Barcelona immediately began moving to new quarters.

As night fell on the damaged city three buildings still were burning and rescue workers labored in the glare and with the aid of flashlights searching for more victims. Officials believed the final death count could not be completed for days.

Each of the successive bombings seemed worse to Barcelonans. In the attack at 7:45 a. m. at least 126 persons were killed and over 100 wounded when a subway entrance was hit.

A little later the narrow winding streets of the "old town"—Barcelona's poor section—were struck, killing about 35 and wounding 80 more.

The noon attack centered on the Plaza Catalunya in the heart of the city, rocking restaurants and cafes crowded with lunchers.

Bill Rogers, son of the late American humorist, was among those who escaped injury when guests of one of the largest luxury hotels were shaken from their beds by a bomb blast.

Rebels Take Caspe.

Hendaye, France (At the Spanish Frontier), March 17 (AP).—Spanish insurgents driving toward dismemberment of government Spain today captured Caspe—one more objective on their march to the sea.

Gen. Franco's heavily reinforced armies in eastern Spain smashed government resistance that was the greatest since the Madrid-Barcelona regime lost Belchite early in the week-old insurgent offensive.

The government announced at the same time its troops had killed 4,000 insurgents in "the worst fighting of the civil war" in the sector south of Caspe.

Opposing forces there sought domination of the Alcaniz-Montalban highway. The government said its troops had repulsed three insurgent attempts to take Alcoriz, the small city dominating the center of the highway.

Insurgent reports said five international brigades were dispersed in the capture of Caspe and hundreds of foreigners taken prisoner in the mountainous battle area.

Caspe had been heavily fortified by the government defenders and was the last stronghold in the path of the insurgent left wing except for Falset, only 10 miles from the Mediterranean and key to the coastal city of Tarragona.

Baby Murder Ring Hunted as 4 Bodies Are Found in Sewer

Discovery of badly decomposed bodies of four babies and a three-month embryo in a sewer at Ninth and Euclid streets northwest started a police investigation last night into the possibility of murder and illegal medical practices.

The bodies were discovered by two employes of the District sewer department during a routine inspection.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said that the bodies had evidently been in the sewer about two weeks. He believed that they were all colored, but added positive identification was difficult.

Immediately after their discovery, Detective Sergt. Clyde N. Strange, of the Homicide Squad, made an intensive search of the neighborhood, seeking information that might lead to discovery of an illegal medical practices ring.

The bodies were found within two blocks of each other. Two were found in a sewer where Ninth street ends at Euclid street; others were found in two sewers in the 700 block of Euclid street. They were removed to the morgue.

ever, nothing regarding the details of this action will be announced before Friday afternoon."

The official announcement this morning said:

"The Polish note was handed to the Lithuanian government in Kovno at 9 p. m. (Thursday) containing the well-known Polish demands. At a time specified therein the Polish government expects an answer."

[In Paris, Lithuania, through her minister to Paris, last night notified Poland she was ready to discuss settlement of difficulties between the two nations, the Associated Press reported.

[Lithuanian Minister Petras Klimas informed Polish Ambassador Jules Lukasiewicz that Lithuania is ready to designate a diplomatic representative to meet an authorized representative of Poland. The meeting would be held in a neutral city, possibly Paris—Editor's note.]

The dispute, threatening actual war, arose from the killing of a Polish frontier guard on March 11.

"We demand abolition of the frontier between Lithuania and Poland!" said banners carried by the 100,000 Warsaw demonstrators.

The crowd sent a deputation to Smigly Rydz, who is inspector general of the army and actually the real ruler of Poland, who told them:

"I am deeply moved by the fact that all hearts are assembled around me. I shall not disappoint your confidence."

The gravity of the situation was shown in the fact that neither Smigly-Rydz, who is inspector general sought to calm the anger of the crowds.

General War Threatened.

"The government has been deeply impressed by the anti-Lithuanian demonstrations, especially by the Warsaw demonstration occurring tonight," a government spokesman said.

"Foreign Minister Joseph Beck received the Italian Ambassador, Baron Valentino, German Ambassador Hans-Adolf von Moltke and French Ambassador Leon Noel and Deputy Foreign Minister Count Zembeck received British Ambassador Sir William Kennard for lengthy conferences."

Virtually all of Europe's heavily armed nations might be drawn into any war arising from the Polish-Lithuanian dispute and it was for this reason that Britain, Russia, France, Germany and Italy hastened to consult with the Polish government yesterday.

Britain and France informed the foreign office that they were gravely apprehensive.

Berlin was known to be watching the Polish situation, which might upset the balance of eastern Europe by any unexpected flare-up.

May Ask Capital Move.

The government's formula for a settlement was understood to include:

1. Immediate resumption of diplomatic relations with Kovno, the Lithuanian capital.

2. Immediate resumption of railway, postal and telephonic communications, interrupted by recent aggravations between the two countries.

3. Alteration of the Lithuanian constitution establishing Vilna, situated near the Polish border and long a subject of controversy, as the nation's capital. Vilna now is occupied by the Poles.

4. Reciprocal arrangements concerning treatment of national minorities, with guarantees of the development of the cultural and national life of 200,000 Poles in Lithuania.

5. Commencement of negotiations for a customs and commerce agreement.

6. Satisfaction for the recent Polish frontier incident.

Hull

either of internationalism or of isolationism."

He declared that this Government had not the slightest intention of using American armed forces for "policing the world." But, he added, "we equally have not the slightest intention of reversing a tradition of a century and a half by abandoning our deep concern for, and our advocacy of, the establishment everywhere of international order under law, based upon the well-recognized principles to which I have referred."

Big Navy Defended.

He defended the proposed authorization for an increase in the Navy, declaring that "no policy would prove more disastrous than for an important nation to fail to arm adequately when international lawlessness is on the rampage."

"It is my considered judgment," he solemnly added, "that, in the present state of world affairs, to do less than is now proposed would lay our country open to unpredictable hazards."

Failure to do less than is now proposed for the Navy, he continued, would "seriously restrict our Nation's ability to command, without purpose or occasion for resorting to arms, proper respect for its legitimate rights and interests, the surrender of which would constitute abandonment of the fundamental principles of justice and morality and peace among nations."

One nation alone, Hull asserted, should not undertake to maintain these principles. Prudence and common sense, he continued, "dictate that where this and other nations have common interests and common objectives, we should not hesitate to exchange information and to confer with the governments of such other nations and, in dealing with the problems confronting each alike, to proceed along parallel lines—this Government retaining at all times its independence of judgment and freedom of action."

The Secretary of State again made it clear that the one thing this Government would not do was to become involved in any kind of an entangling alliance or commitment.

He assailed those who advocate amending the Constitution to require a referendum before war could be declared, pointing out to them that what they urged was outside of the system of "representative democracy" established by the founding fathers.

War Referendum Opposed.

He demanded to know of them "what warrant is there, in reason or experience, for the assumption—which underlies such proposals as the plan for a popular referendum on the subject of declaring war—that the Chief Executive and the Congress will be at any time more eager and more likely to embark upon war than would the general body of citizens to whom they are directly responsible?"

Hull contended that no President or Congress ever have carried the country into war against the wishes of the people.

Blum Cabinet, Arms Fund Win 369-196 Vote

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 17.—Premier Blum's four-day-old cabinet and its $1,000,000,000 program for swift rearmament won a 369-to-196 vote of confidence tonight in the Chamber of Deputies.

Shortly before facing the chamber, the cabinet had taken two steps to hasten France's arms building.

It authorized extraordinary expenses of 4,465,000,000 francs (about $134,000,000), mostly for new fighting planes, and decided to ask Parliament for additional exceptional armaments credits.

[More than 4,000 anti-Fascist demonstrators, including war veterans, fought with police reinforcements along the banks of the Seine at midnight in a demonstration urging relief for government Spain, the United Press reported. They were finally dispersed.—Editor's note.]

Earlier, a minority had rejected Blum's offer to form a national union government—of all parties—to succeed the present Popular Front cabinet.

Arms Call Cheered.

Most deputies were believed to want a national union ministry in face of the delicate European situation, but not under the leadership of Blum, a Socialist.

The premier's demand for stronger French defenses, however, was greeted with cheers.

He declared France was compelled to speed up her arms program because Germany's annexation of Austria had shaken the Continent and easily might lead to "much more serious" consequences.

Debate March 22.

Blum assured Parliament France would go to extremes to preserve peace, but warned she must fulfill her pledges—a reference to her treaty obligation to aid Czechoslovakia if that country is invaded.

A foreign affairs debate was scheduled for March 22. Blum had requested a delay to allow Europe's snarled situation to become better clarified.

Parliament already has approved ordinary, extraordinary and extra-budgetary expenses of 25,945,405,856 francs (about $778,362,000) for fighting forces in 1938.

Propaganda Begins.

Vienna, March 17 (AP).—The new Austro-German Nazi administration threw its propoganda machine into high gear today to turn out a heavy vote in favor of Austria's union with Germany in the April 10 plebiscite.

A branch of Paul Joseph Goebbel's propaganda ministry was set up to carry out the job. One of the initial steps was to order 20,000 radio receiving sets from Germany for distribution to remote localities so that Nazi oratory could be heard in the fartnest corner of the land.

The Nazi administration disclosed plans for development of the Danube, through which German builders envisage a ship canal route from the North Sea to the Black Sea by way of the Danube and Rhine rivers.

Police announced arrest of several "clericals" for disseminating disturbing rumors.

Nazi Troopers Raid Cloisters, Seize Munitions

Austrian Priests' Arrest Stirs Fear of New Church-State Feud.

By the United Press.

Vienna, March 17.—Nazi storm troops raided Catholic monasteries and cloisters in upper Austria tonight, seizing arms and munitions caches and anti-Nazi propaganda, and arresting several priests, German authorities announced.

Among the arrested priests was Father Josef Maeranderl, of Linz, capital of upper Austria.

Spokesmen of the five-day-old Nazi regime said arms were found in the cellars of the headquarters of the Catholic Employes Association at Linz and in monasteries at Aigen and Sanktflorian. Other arms were reported to have been hidden in the old cathedral at Linz.

Catholics' Hopes Fall.

Large quantities of anti-Nazi pamphlets were said to have been confiscated from the Catholic Youth Organization's headquarters, also at Linz.

The alleged discoveries immediately aroused fears among Catholics, who form 90 per cent of Austria's 6,700,000 people, that as in Germany a Nazi-Catholic feud has begun.

They had hoped that in view of Theodore Cardinal Innitzer's conversation with Chancellor Hitler early this week there would be no anti-Catholic campaign in Austria.

The government announcement was made in the midst of an intensified drive against Austria's Jews and anti-Nazis. Additional suicides were reported. Many attempted to flee. Many were arrested.

Prominent Monarchists, former government officials and Jews were placed under "protective" arrest. It was reported many would be brought to trial on charges ranging from resistance to attacks on the Nazis.

The wave of suicides spread to two prominent Jewish physicians, Prof. Arnold Baumgartner and Prof. Bela Hurtz. Baumgartner was director and Hurtz a departmental head of the Lainz Hospital, largest municipal hospital in Vienna.

Police Official Dies.

A high police functionary, Karl Navratil, died of a heart attack when arrested in company with Police Lieut. Col. Heinrich Mueller, Vice District Commander Herbert Levikus and Erwin Hutterer. All are from the twelfth Vienna district where six months ago the Nazi subleader Kluge committed suicide after being arrested for making swastikas.

Baron Friedrich Ritter von Wiesner, Austrian Monarchist leader and personal representative of Archduke Otto von Hapsburg, pretender to the nonexistent throne of a now nonexisting country, was placed in protective custody.

Former President Miklas and former Chancellor Schuschnigg, who were forced to resign under Hitler's ultimatum to the Austrian government, also were held.

[In Berlin, Nazi spokesmen said Schuschnigg would be permitted to decide for himself where to live, the Associated Press reported. These sources said that if he desired to go abroad, he would be permitted to take his belongings, including his savings, as an expression of magnanimity from the Berlin government.—Editor's note.]

Princess Fanny Starhemberg, mother of Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, former Heimwehr chief, was arrested yesterday and confined to a small cell throughout the day. She was released after influential friends intervened. She was under house arrest tonight.

Wilhelm Kleinwaechter, former chief of the press department, one-time secretary to the Washington Legation in the mid-twenties and subsequently consul general at Chicago, still was in police custody after his arrest Saturday.

Edward Gruber, important Jewish merchant, was arrested when he received a coded telegram from Fritz Stockinger, former finance minister, who had fled to Rumania. Stockinger asked Gruber to inform his family that he had arrived safely. He escaped with Guido Zernatto, secretary general of the anti-Nazi Fatherland Front.

Aid Cheers Czechs.

Prague, March 17 (AP).—Great satisfaction was expressed in the Chamber of Deputies today over Soviet Russia's assurances she would fight to defend Czechoslovakia if this war-created republic were attacked.

Meanwhile, two suicides were reported here among refugees who fled Nazified Austria.

Frau Else Pollack von Parnigg, 54 year-old widow of a prominent textile industrialist, was said to have jumped to her death from a fifth floor.

Dr. Fritz Kreisler, 31, former well-known Viennese lawyer-doctor, was reported to have ended his life. His mother became insane and was placed in an asylum.

Austria Likely To Lead Hitler Reichstag Talk

New German Elections Are Slated to Accompany Plebiscite.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 17.—German-Austrian union was expected today to be the major topic of the declaration Reichsfuehrer Hitler will make tomorrow night to the Reichstag.

Dissolution of the existing Reichstag and the calling of new elections was taken for granted. (The Reichstag is the only legislative assembly in Germany; Hitler calls it to hear important pronouncements.)

Since Austria has become a part of Germany, provision must be made for the new province's representation and presumably Germany, like Austria, will march to the polls April 10, the date of the plebiscite on union.

There was speculation whether Hitler also would discuss the situation in Spain, Czechoslovakia, the Free City of Danzig and the Polish-Lithuanian conflict.

Circles close to the chancellery—who emphasized they could not speak for the Fuehrer—expressed the opinion that for the present Germany would be so occupied getting Austria rearranged on Nazi principles that there was little likelihood of German moves in any of those directions.

They admitted the possibility, however, of Hitlerian surprises.

Hitler, who last addressed the Reichstag February 20 when he proclaimed protection of Germans outside of Germany, recognized Manchukuo and announced an increasing demand for return of war-lost colonies, will begin speaking at 8 p. m. (2 p. m. Eastern standard time) tomorrow in the Kroll Opera House.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler tonight ordered Germany's Reichsbank to take over immediately the Austrian National Bank.

By another decree, the Austrian railways, beginning tomorrow, pass under the management of the Reichsbahn.

D. C. Fans Mob Deanna Durbin In Debut Here

Child Movie Star Upsets Officialdom's Routine on First Visit.

A very bewildered little girl stepped from a train here yesterday and almost upset the routine of Union Station. Her name is Deanna Durbin. She's in the movies.

Clad from head to toes in a bright green ensemble, the youthful songstress of RKO Pictures had her first glimpse of the Nation's Capital over the heads of a swarming, screaming mob of school children and grownups.

A police escort was the only thing that saved her bright St. Patrick's Day dress from the none-too-gentle hands of eager souvenir hunters. Her fingers flew for the autograph seekers until someone put a stop to it.

To "See the Sights."

Miss Durbin, top-ranking child motion picture star, is here to "see the sights." She greeted newspaper theater critics at a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

From Union Station, the blue-eyed youngster was driven through milling throngs to Capitol Hill. There again, she upset routine and posed for pictures with Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, of California. There were a lot of other Senators who wanted to pose with her, but there wasn't room for them to get near enough.

Then she was greeted by Vice President Garner and stopped all legislative machinery by appearing on both the Senate and House floors.

"What do you think of your Washington reception?" Miss Durbin was asked.

She gulped twice and blinked.

"It's fine—I guess."

Crowds Stall Her Car.

On more than one occasion during a subsequent tour of important places the young actress' car was stalled by crowds of admirers who flocked around, climbed on the running boards and pressed their noses against the windows.

At the White House, Marvin McIntyre, secretary to the President, escorted her on a trip of inspection. Although she had little to say, Miss Durbin showed unmistakable evidence of a youngster receiving the thrill of her life.

Today she visits other Washington points of interest and leaves at 3 p. m. for New York.

Stokowski Joins Garbo in Denial They Will Marry

Ravello, Italy, March 17 (AP).—Greta Garbo, the actress, and Leopold Stokowski, the symphony maestro, said today they were not planning to marry. At the ancient villa where they have been vacationing for three weeks, Stokowski denied flatly they contemplated marriage. Miss Garbo explained that Stokowski was only "a friend who has seen much and offered to show me some of the beauty of the world."

"I have never been about much so I optimistically accepted his offer. I only want to be left alone." The screen siren complained bitterly that she had seen little even in Italy because of curious crowds.

Gentle Winds to Bring Mild Temperature Dip

Gentle winds will bring a slight dip in temperature today the Weather Bureau forecast last night. A low of 44 degrees was expected before dawn. From a low of 47 early yesterday the thermometer rose to 54 at 1 p. m.

Recreation Units' Unification Urged

Unification of all iDstrict recreation agencies was urged yesterday by Miss Sybil Baker, director of playgrounds, speaking at a luncheon of the Washington Council of Social Workers at the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A.

"This would enable an effective pool of information of the doings in the recreation sphere, and we would thus be in a better position to give actual facts to the public," she said.

Miss Baker told the social workers that recreation appropriations "are hidden away in many agencies, so that we can not know accurately just how much is being expended in that field."

Ex-Oil Official Jailed Upon Arson Charge

Media, Pa., March 17 (AP).—Albert R. Knight, 56, of Lansdowne, Pa., a former iol company executive, was sentenced today to three to ten years for arson. Knight was found guilty in a fire which damaged his home last May 28. He was acquitted of a charge that he attempted to kill his four children to collect more than $100,000 insurance.

Motor Club Backs Apr. 1 Registration

Support for the proposal to defer local registration of motor vehicles from January 1 to April 1 was voiced by members of the advisory board of the Keystone Automobile Club, meeting yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

The board also favored a suggestion that drivers be re-examined for licenses after serious traffic violations or accidents involving personal injury.

Unidentified police cars, used in traffic control, were attacked by the board. They held the psychological effect of the presence of a policeman always is a deterrent to speeding and other traffic offenses.

rant window without being accosted by a woman—sometimes even two of them in the space of one block.

"Many of them patrol the streets in automobiles, too, picking up whoever is willing. They can ruin a legitimate business district very quickly," Feldman declared. He said that street walking brought other crimes to a neighborhood, gave it a bad name among women, and ran all types of prospective customers away.

Will Raid 'Call' Girls.

The raids last night were instituted by Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson, who said they would continue until the city is "cleaned up." He said that the police have telephone numbers of girls "who do business on call" and that raids against them would be next.

Men who have complained of being robbed by the girls who picked them up have placed claims which ranged as high as $400 and included rings, watches and fraternity jewelry.

Nearly all of the 18 women held for questioning have previous records. One had a record which extended over eight pages and showed she had been picked up 13 times in two months. Most of them had been arrested previously on charges of disorderly conduct, and some are believed wanted in other cities and States.

If they are wanted in other jurisdictions, police said, they will be sent there. Otherwise, vagrancy charges will be placed against them and they will be warned to leave town.

Among the 18 held last night, all "levels of street-walking" were represented, a police official said. Some were young enough to pretend a naive innocence and others appeared bold and hardened. Some were nicely dressed, and others gaudily.

Numerous complaints registered against some of them upheld the contention of Feldman and the federation that "a street walker does not mind the light fines now given them, nor the vagrancy charges placed against them."

One jail sentence, Feldman claimed, would be more effective "than three pages of fines." The vagrancy fines, he said, usually are as low as $5.

"These women are so bold that they solicit any man who comes along," Feldman charged. "One of them recently accosted a captain of police who was wearing civilian clothes."

The Central Business Men's Association was host at the federation meeting last night. Leo Rover, former district attorney, was principal speaker.

Rover urged the businessmen to have faith in their local police and judiciary officials, asserting that the present crime conditions are in no measure due "to negligence on their part."

"You can do your part toward breaking up crime in the District by asking for an increased law-enforcing personnel and new buildings to replace the old ones now being used by some of the offices," he declared.

Theodore S. Grape, federation president, and W. J. Mileham, president of the central business group, presided at the meeting. Lieut. Joseph Shimon led the clean-up raids.

Chamberlain to Clarify Policy In Effort to Avert Party Split

By the Associated Press.

London, March 17.—Prime Minister Chamberlain decided tonight to make a clear-cut statement on Britain's foreign policy to quell a rising tide of opposition to him in the cabinet, Commons and the country.

Menaced by revolt within his own ranks, against his cautious policy, Chamberlain was reported to have given ground in an effort to restore harmony.

Sources close to the government said Chamberlain would tell Commons next week the stand the cabinet is adopting on such critical issues as Czechoslovakia and Spain.

The prime minister acted after the cabinet and the dominant Conservative Party had split on Chamberlain's foreign policy.

Foes Demand Change.

Young bloods in the cabinet, led by War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha and bulwarked by impressive backing in the House of Commons, were reported to have demanded of Chamberlain:

A clear-cut pledge of aid in support of Czechoslovakia should she be attacked.

A firmer policy in the Spanish civil war to prevent Italy and Germany from dominating the peninsula.

Refusal, it was said, would lead to a number of resignations.

On the heels of this came a warning from a committee of influential Conservatives, headed by Winston Churchill and Robert J. G. Boothby, that Chamberlain's foreign policy must be changed quickly or they would join the opposition in Commons.

Chamberlain, prime minister since May 28, when he succeeded Stanley Baldwin on the latter's retirement and elevation to the peerage, last month undertook a program of "realistic" dealings with dictator states.

These dealings were imperiled in the case of Italy and wiped out in the case of Germany by Adolf Hitler's absorption of Austria into a greater Germany.

Reliable sources said Boothby's movement might lead to at least 50 government supporters joining the opposition in Parliament.

These sources said the movement against Chamberlain's foreign policy was fully supported by two ministers—Hore-Belisha, who is a Liberal National, and Dominions Secretary Malcolm MacDonald, a National Laborite.

It was stated that three Conservatives were wavering, but likely would fall into line.

The attitude of three more ministers was in doubt, making a possible score of 8 against 14 for Chamberlain in the 22-man cabinet.

Laughlin's Trial For Fraud Opens

Aleging an indicemnt charging him with larceny, embezzlement, larceny after trust and forgery and and uttering, had been presented against him as the result of a "conspiracy," James J. Laughlin, member of the District Bar, yesterday went on trial in District Court before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue.

Laughlin, who had ben convicted previously, but whose appeal for a review by the United States Court of Appeals resulted in an acquittal for him, claimed he would show several members of the staff of the United States attorney were in a conspiracy to present the charges.

Assistant District Attorney Harry L. Underwood, the only witness yesterday, testified as to the recipt of a letter from the three clients of Laughlin. The trio, it was alleged by the Government, were in jail, had given Lauglin $2,800 to secure their release on bond, and had failed to secure an accounting of the money afterward.

It is an imposing list of releases that is summarized in this announcement.

BELL.

Probably foremost among the imminent productions to be seen on the screen at the Earle Theater is "Jezebel," in which Bette Davis is the star. This has been heralded from practically all points of the compass as one of the most impressive dramas of the Old South ever brought to the screen, and the vehicle of Miss Davis' finest performances to date for the celluloids. In view of the fact that Miss Davis already is an Academy award winner, this is about as high praise as could be bestowed upon one of the cinema's most accomplished actresses.

The stage entertainment for the week of March 25, when "Jezebel" is to be shown on Thirteenth street, will take the form of an appropriate "Lawn Party Revue," in which the atmosphere of the picture will be moderately sustained by Aunt Jemima, the Radio Rogues, the Lathrop Brothers and Virginia Lee and other vaudevillians of the first flight.

Then will come a considerable succession of screen plays of which much is expected in the way of superlative entertainment. Among them may be mentioned "Fools For Scandal," a romantic comedy with music, starring Carole Lombard and Fernand Gravet, with Ralph Bellamy featured; "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," the Ernst Lubitsch picturization of the stage play, co-starring Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper; "The Adventures of Robin Hood," in which Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland share honors, with Basil Rathbone and Claude Rains both importantly cast; "College Swing," musical extravaganza, with Burns and Allen, Martha Raye, Bob Hope, Edward Everett Horton, Ben Blue, Betty Gable, Jackie Coogan and many others; "Women Are Like That," with Kay Francis and Pat O'Brien occupying top billing.

And that isn't all. Harold Lloyd's first picture in two or three years, "Professor Beware" is prominently placed in the spring parade, as are also Columbia's "There's Always a Woman," with Joan Blondell and Melvyn Douglas; "Men Are Such Fools," featuring Wayne Morris and Priscilla Lane, and "Dangerous to Know," with Akim Tamiroff, Anna May Wong and Gail Patrick. So much for the screen fare.

As to the stage attractions, Mr. Payette and his associate executives are a little more reticent. They are content merely to intimate only that there are surprises in store for Earle patrons whose tastes lean slightly in the direction of the living portions of the programs.

With Harry Anger virtually revolutionizing the manner of vaudeville presentation in the National Capital, by welding each bill into a closely-knit revue, the expectation of diverting stage entertainment seems not to be ill-founded.

The reserved seat sale for the Washington Civic Theater's production of Paul Green's play of "Johnny Johnson" has been opened in the lobby of the Raleigh Hotel, in which the Civic's downtown office is located. Harrison Libby will be seen in the principal role. The play will run from Wednesday through Saturday next week, in Wardman Park, and for the same number of days the following week, the longest prescheduled run in the history of Washington's foremost resident acting group.

It is that versatile stentor of the theater, Mr. Richard Maney—"Dick" to you and me—who drops a line to say that after a 28-week run at the Empire Theater in New York, "The Star-Wagon," Maxwell Anderson's play in which Guthrie McClintic features Burgess Meredith and Lillian Gish, will start on a nine-week tour at the Grand Opera House, Chicago, on Tuesday, April 12. Chicago, Detroit, Washington, Philadelphia and Boston will be visited, in the order named. Hooray for our side!

The third in a series of plays, written by Anderson and produced by McClintic, with Meredith the featured male player, "The Star-Wagon," judged by its New York record, has been more enduring and more profitable than either of its predecessors, "Winterset" and "High Tor." With its final performance at the Empire on April 9, it will have played 221 performances. "Winterset" scored 195 in New York and "High Tor" 171. That will give you a rough idea.

It is a happy augury that the New York cast will be seen in the play when it reaches the National Theater in this city. In addition to Mr. Meredith—the youthful acting president of the Actors Equity Association—and Miss Gish, Russell Collins, Mildred Natwick and Jane Buchanan will be seen in prominent roles.

There is a little movement going on among the motion picture distributing agencies in the National Capital. Eddie Heiber, long Washington manager for Universal Films, on Sunday will hie him away from familiar scenes to assume the Universal Film Exchange managership in Detroit. Eddie will be missed by his Washington associates. He will be succeeded in the local field by Nate Sauber, formerly identified with Universal here, who will return to the town where he once made a considerable reputation as a basktball player as well as film salesman. For the past several years Nate has been attached to the Universal office in Buffalo. But the Variety Club still won't seem quite the same without Eddie and Mrs. Heiber to pep the place up with their gay chatter. It is Eddie, you may remember, who thinks I stole his overcoat one riotous night. I haven't dared wear the rag downtown since!

There is more to one of these "amateur swing contests" than meets the eye—or the ear. Take the case of Tommy Dorsey, opening on the stage of the Earle Theater today, for instance.

More than 200 applications were received by the Earle management from local residents desirous of participating in the chance to win a $75 first prize. Their instruments encompassed everything from "swinging musical spoons" to a "swing harp." But drummers seemed to predominate. It seems Washington is practically inundated by a horde of percussionists who think they are good. As Mr. Dorsey's representative, Jack Egan, inquires, "What goes on down here?"

One drummer admits that he hasn't had a pair of drumsticks in his hands for three years, but wants a crack at the prize because he is sure that "once I get behind a set of drums, I'll just naturally swing out on them. It's easy for me." Gene Krupa would like to meet this chap!

Among the entries are many service men from the Navy, Army and Marine Corps. And there is one newspaper man in the bunch.

Don't look at me!

The casting committee of the Pierce Hall Players has named Nell Childs and Ellen Scholze to play the principal roles of Mrs. Rimpleger and her daughter, Elizabeth, in the Players' production of "Three Cornered Moon," the Mary Boland-Claudette Colbert screen success of a few years ago. A strong supporting cast has been assembled for the contributory roles in this amusing play of a slightly "screwy" family.

In Hollywood With HEDDA HOPPER

HEDDA HOPPER.

Every celebrity who could beg, borrow or steal, the price, the dress and the jewels was there. Packed like sardines in a can in the Biltmore Bowl. This award is prayed over and fought over. And everyone goes with the hope in his heart that he'll have a ringside table. It took a souvenir from a sawmill—one Charlie McCarthy—to throw all dignity to the winds and call those prized statues "knick-knacks." And when he looked at his, he said it was a miracle that anyone could carve one as small as that.

It's always interesting to me that Bergen is a trifle self-conscious until he brings out Charlie. But I don't think anyone ever sees him bring Charlie out of his resting place—a specially constructed suitcase, which he has to keep locked, because every pair of hands would have to be securely tied to keep them off Charlie if he were sitting placidly among you as a guest. Not that he's ever been placid.

Bob Burns as toastmaster was quite a refreshing note. It's not only what he says but the way he says it. People say, "Why go to Hollywood, it's filled with stars—you can't get in." But look at Bob Burns. His rise would have given the late Mark Twain another new adventure story.

Everyone there was delighted that Spencer Tracy (who was ill in a hospital) got the acting award for men. But it took a woman in that whole assemblage to put a lump in your throat. When Mrs. Tracy stepped reluctantly into the spotlight, went to the microphone, and said, sincerely: "I thank you for Spencer, Johnnie, Susie and myself." Had she spoken sooner, I believe some of the other speeches might have been briefer.

A salute to Frank Capra, Carl Freund, Walt Disney, Cecil B. DeMille, W. C. Fields and last but not least, Mack Sennett, whom the Academy honored as the "Pappy" of the industry. And as I sat there, I wondered if the amusement world paid enough homage to comedians. They say a laugh is worth a thousand dollars in any picture. Mack Sennett knew that long before "The Awful Truth" and "Bringing Up Baby," or any of our current comedies.

As for the girls, it was so crowded I couldn't see all of them. But Mrs. Henry Fonda, with daisies in her hair and a gray gown, looked like a "Daisy" Madonna from Park avenue.

Norma Shearer, on the arm of Louis B. Mayer, wore a long white beaded coat. She slipped a long black comb on her blonde page-boy bob just before they turned the spotlight on her.

Seems to me, with the success of his play "Golden Boy" in New York, Clifford Odets might have bought himself a dinner jacket. He was the only one dressed in sack suit.

Studio Has Tony For Another Year

The rising tide of Tony Martin's popularity was further evidenced last week when Darryl F. Zanuck exercised the option on the singing actor's contract.

Tony is at present playing the male lead in "Kentucky Moonshine," in which the Ritz Brothers are starred. In the two years he has been under contract he rose quickly in importance from his first small singing bit to leading roles. His other recent pictures in which he has played leads are "Sally, Irene and Mary," in which he plays opposite his wife, Alice Faye, and the Eddie Cantor starring vehicle, "Ali Baba Goes to Town."

Dual-Feature Bills Godsend, Says Producer

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, March 17. — Scott Dunlap, leading independent movie producer, entered the double-feature free-for-all today with the declaration that the two-films-for-the-price-of-one policy has been the salvation of the industry.

The question of how much entertainment the fan deserves for his half dollar now is one of the hottest in Hollywood. Samuel Goldwyn started the controversy when he said the movies showing two films at each performance were driving audiences from the theaters, and ruining the eyes of the customers, as well as the quality of the pictures they saw.

As vice president of Monogram Pictures Corporation, the bluff and hearty Dunlap makes more movies for less money perhaps than anyone else in town. He produces 46 pictures a year, mostly designed for the bottom half of a double bill.

Abolition Dangerous.

"The end of the double feature would mean the end of the independent producer, like Monogram," he said. "It would mean monopoly of the whole picture entertainment field by the big producers, through their control of theaters. It would halve production in Hollywood, close countless independent theaters —which couldn't get films to show— and in all, throw probably 3,000,000 people out of work.

"And it wouldn't have the slightest effect on the quality of the films being produced. There are bad ones and good ones, and the cost of production has little to do with it. Many a time an exhibitor is bailed out by his second feature, which turns out to be better entertainment than one for which he paid big money.

"But I don't think Hollywood need be ashamed of its product. Take Broadway and count the number of really successful plays it produces in a season. We have far more hits a year in pictures than New York ever does on the stage.

What Is "Bad Picture?"

"For that matter, what is a bad picture? There's never been a picture produced that somebody didn't like."

Dunlap was particularly vehement in his comment on the charges of Chicago Parent-Teacher organizations that double features are ruining the eyes of school children.

"Since when have they discovered that?" he demanded. "Have they ever figured at what reel of a show a child's eyes become tired? And isn't it a fact that the average boy or girl, even in a single feature town, always stays to see the show twice? The fact is, those Chicago children's eyes right now are better off inside a theater than they would be outdoors. The glare of the snow would be harder on them than any double feature program."

Washington Excepted.

He said that the practice of showing double features started 25 years ago in New England and gradually spread throughout the country with exception of the Southeast and a few isolated cities like Washington, D. C., and Minneapolis, Minn.

"And New England always has been healthy theater territory," he said. "The producers didn't start the double-feature. The fans wanted it and the exhibitors insisted upon it.

"The truth is that the public wants a two-and-one-half-hour show and it intends to get it.

"As for those who don't like two features, they've still got telephones —and legs. They can call the theater to find out when a film is going on, and if they want to, they can walk out when it's over," he said.

New York, March 17.

ENTERPRISE: One of the Song-o-grams Postal Telegraph delivered on St. Patrick's Day is called "Irish Eyes Are Blue." The author's name doesn't appear thereon . . . It was written—words and music—by Anna Case Mackay, wife of Clarence Mackay, who is Irving Berlin's father-in-law and head of the Postal Telegraph . . . Mrs. Mackay also has composed a popular song called "That Old Fashioned Picture." It will be published by one of Mr. Berlin's competitors—Irving Mills.

INFLUENCE: Hendrik Willem van Loon, a 200-pounder, attended a party where he spied Dale Carnegie, who is somewhat frail . . . "Aren't you the man who goes around influencing people? van Loon asked . . . Carnegie nodded from the chair where he was sitting quietly . . . "Well," van Loon continued, "here's another way of influencing people." Then he sat down—on Dale Carnegie!

TRIUMPH: Last year the WPA Federal Theater was scheduled to produce Marc Blitzstein's "The Cradle Will Rock." On the day of the opening, the production was canceled—because the officials thought it too hot to handle. The Mercury Theater thereupon produced it, and the critics esteemed it one of the finest offerings of the American theater . . . Recently "The Cradle Will Rock" was published by Random House. A copy of that book was purchased last week by the Federal Theater—which also produces revivals of plays reflecting the American scene. The book was sent to the playreaders, who read it solemnly and reported enthusiastically: "By all means, this is an extraordinary play which our Federal Theater should produce!"

REQUEST: Ben Bernie entertained at the White House correspondents ball last Saturday, which was attended by the President . . . Bernie kept watching Roosevelt, and noticed the President whispering something to an aide, who immediately walked across the room toward the maestro . . . "As a proud citizen of this grand country," Bernie told him, "I place myself at the disposal of the President. I hope I'm not presumptuous—but is there anything I can do for him?" . . . "Yes," the aide replied. "He'd like to hear your old theme song, 'Let's All Sing Like the Dickie-bird Sings, twee, twee twee, twa twa."

* * * *

YOUTH: Mayor LaGuardia has a chef's cap at his home and uses it Sunday evenings, when he likes to cook the meal for his family . . . Eric LaGuardia, the mayor's 6-year-old son, was asked by the teacher at his school: "What's your name?" . . . "Eric LaGuardia," the boy answered . . . "Your father's name?" was the next question . . . "Fiorello LaGuardia," Eric replied . . . "Where does he work?" the teacher continued . . . "City Hall," the youngster answered . . . "What does he do?" was the final question—to which Eric replied: "Cook."

* * * *

DEFEAT: Before the Washington parade of the National Council of the American Youth Congress last Saturday, a young lady rode 5 miles through the Capital streets on the horse which "Paul Revere" was to ride in the parade . . . "Paul Revere" rode, but when the parade ended at the Capitol, he couldn't find his pretty groom, who was the only one who knew from which stable the horse had been rented . . . So Paul Revere, wearied by the long ride, left his horse tied to a tree on the Capitol grounds—and went home in a taxi.

CHATTER: The new secretary to U. S. Supreme Court Justice Stone is expected to be Alexis Carrel Coudert, son of Frederic Coudert, jr. . . . Hildegarde, the only American scheduled to sing at the Salzburg Festival, has canceled her plans . . . Officials now insist that there are 15 separate policy slip rings operating in New York . . . Muscle Men Pound Fox Dance Floor

Two-hundred-and-twenty-five-pound Victor McLaglen and 190-pound Brian Donlevy have been hopping, stomping and skipping to the intricacies of swing music under the guidance of Dance Director Nick Castle.

Reason: McLaglen and Donlevy are learning the Big Apple, which they will be seen doing in "Battle of Broadway."

Lon Chaney Sees Dad's Great Films

Inconspicuous in the audience of a Los Angeles theater the other night was Lon Chaney, jr., who had come to pay homage to the memory of his illustrous father when the theater showed two of Lon Chaney's old successes, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "The Phantom of the Opera."

Lon, jr., is now following in his father's footsteps as a film actor, and is at present appearing with the Ritz Brothers in "Kentucky Moonshine."

Now The Coal Board Conflict.

An unwieldly administrative agency and an untrained personnel recruited without regard for civil service rules and regulations combine to offer sufficient explanation of the troubles of the Bituminous Coal Commission. In addition to these handicaps the commission has been assigned the task of trying to enforce an extraordinarily complicated regulatory measure that is probably unworkable and certainly seriously defective on the economic side.

Furthermore, the commission's prestige has been seriously impaired by the recent adverse court decision which resulted in the withdrawal of all its announced price schedules. Failure to hold open hearings at which groups affected by the proposed price changes could appear to protest was responsible for the defeat of the commission in the courts. This mistake indicates a lack of the expert legal advice indispensable to the successful launching of an important regulatory experiment.

Resignations of some or all the commissioners might bring temporary peace to the patronage-ridden ranks of the organization but it would not provide the slightest assurance against a perpetuation of strife and inefficiency. The defects of the existing setup call for much more fundamental remedies than the mere withdrawal of a disgruntled commissioner or two.

Thoroughgoing reorganization is needed, providing for a smaller commission composed of experienced administrators, familiar with the problems of the coal industry but not present as special pleaders either for the operators or the miners' unions. What is more, they should be impervious to pressure from representatives of the industry.

The present difficulties of the TVA indicates clearly that even small commissions, manned by experts, provide no guarantee of harmonious unity of action. But at least there is less likelihood of discord and impotent wrangling when a few picked administrators are put in charge of a regulatory agency. Of course, they require the services of a competent staff chosen on the basis of merit. Until the coal commission is released from the grasp of political job hunters, it cannot be expected to accomplish much, however able its leadership.

A fresh start is needed if anything constructive is to be done for the ailing coal industry. And that means Congressional action to correct the glaring defects of the present administrative setup.

Trade Pact Sentiment.

One of our largest agricultural organizations, the American Farm Bureau Federation, heartily indorses the proposal to negotiate a trade treaty with Great Britain. On the other hand, spokesmen for New England manufacturing groups testifying before the Interdepartmental Committee on Reciprocity Information expressed fear that tariff concessions granted the British would injure domestic producers.

The fact that the American Farm Bureau Federation favors the treaty does not, of course, necessarily indicate a pronounced or permanent change of attitude toward proposals to lower tariff barriers by elements hitherto opposed to such action. It all depends on whether the groups directly concerned believe that the concessions will enlarge their foreign market outlets as the farmers hope, in this instance, or whether they anticipate, as do the New England industrialists, increased foreign competition in home markets.

The long-time benefits of opening up foreign markets by mutual tariff concessions may be admitted in principle. But that seldom, if ever, prevents organized pressure groups from protesting against any changes that may affect unfavorably the products in which such groups are especially interested.

It is, however, most encouraging to study the results of a recent poll taken by the American Institute of Public Opinion to test public sentiment toward the negotiation of a trade treaty with Great Britain. Nearly three-fourths of those replying are in favor of the Hull policy in seeking an agreement and approve mutual tariff cuts. Furthermore, while the percentage of approving Democratic replies was somewhat greater than in case of the Republicans, there were large majorities in both cases for the Hull program.

Only a broad inquiry of this sort affords any insight into the attitude of the American people toward the general policy followed. The indorsement given the Hull program in principle should make it easier for the Department of State to persevere in face of the inevitable resistance to reasonable concessions of small organized groups inclined to exaggerate the effects of any concessions at all upon their domestic business.

America Goes On Record.

To a Nation appalled by the cataclysmic sweep of events in Europe, and to a frantic, disordered world eager to know how the United States proposes to use its enormous powers for good or evil, Secretary Hull yesterday spoke clearly, deliberately and impressively. In firm yet careful language he has delivered a most constructive message at the exact psychological moment.

The United States, as Mr. Hull points out, has not merely "a moral right" but also, by its ideals, traditions and fundamental material interests, is definitely obligated to concern itself actively in the rush of events precipitated by the German annexation of Austria. In making this concern effective the Administration will make no "entangling alliances." It cannot make public in advance "a detailed chart of the course of policy and action" to be pursued "under any particular set of circumstances." But the United States can and will work co-operatively for a stable peace "with other nations which are actuated by the same desires and are pursuing the same objectives."

To further this co-operation, and to end the growing impression that this is a decadent, spineless Nation, anxious only to "shrink and shrivel" within the confines of "a self-constituted hermit state," Mr. Hull yesterday strongly indorsed the pending rearmament program. In the "considered judgment" of this most unbelligerent statesman the naval appropriations before Congress constitute a minimum program at this time. "To do less than is now proposed would lay our country open to unpredictable hazards."

On co-operation, on rearmament, and on the determination to exert positive and effective leadership for peace, Mr. Hull speaks the mind of the great majority of thoughtful Americans. With irrefutable logic he closes the door on such hysterical and self-defeating "peace" moves as mandatory neutrality, war referendums, or withdrawal of protection from American lives and property in present or potential danger zones. Such isolationist attitudes he defines as "not a means to security" but only "a fruitful source of insecurity."

This clear statement of position, coming at this fateful juncture, can scarcely fail to have stabilizing effects. There is no doubt that our past evidences of propagandized emotionalism and pussillanimity have encouraged the cycle of aggression which since 1931 has been growing steadily more rampant. But, though the sands of time are running out, it is not yet too late to reverse the trend, provided America has the will to reverse it. Mr. Hull showed that will yesterday. And as a result a sick world is today a little less feverish.

Reduced to bald essentials, the speech of the Secretary of State amount to public announcement that at some unspecified and unpredictable point America will be prepared to defend its ideals by force against the menace of an expanding totalitarian philosophy. To make that warning effective this immensely powerful Nation will now proceed to arm, very reluctantly but for that reason not the less effectively. And henceforth our policy will openly and gladly proceed along lines parallel to that of other nations with standards similar to our own. Through this co-operation will be evidenced that leadership in crisis which the disorganized democracies have the right to expect from the great Republic of the west.

It is well that Mr. Hull saw fit yesterday to speak in terms of force. No other language is recognized or respected in the capitals of the aggressor nations. But force, of the character America can so terribly exert if she is so minded, is understood by those who worship it. For that reason the speech of the Secretary of State will translate very easily into German, into Italian, and into Japanese.

The time for lying down before ceaseless and increasingly flagrant acts of barbarism is over. There is a new hope for a world worthy of human life now that the popular and deeply respected Secretary of State has placed the constructive direction of our foreign policy so unequivocally on record.

Tensions In The Baltic.

Ever since their re-emergence as independent nations, following the break-up of the Russian and German empires, there has been no love lost between Poland and Lithuania.

The chief bone of contention has been the historic city of Vilna and its surrounding area. This region both nations coveted but Poland, very much the stronger power, succeeded in making it her own following a coup d'etat in 1920, at a moment when Vilna's future was being debated by the Council of the League of Nations.

Later, this act of force, one of the first in what has proved a long and disturbing line, was sanctified by the League even as, about the same time, it recognized Lithuania's claim to Memel, the former German port which Lithuanian irregulars had seized. But Lithuania never reconciled herself to the loss of Vilna, her ancient capital, and from 1920 to date the little Baltic republic has refused to enter into treaty relations with Poland, has kept the Polish frontier closed and in other ways has regarded herself as in a state of war with her neighbor.

To Poland this situation has been an unceasing irritant, with occasional flare-ups on the closed border adding to the state of unfriendliness between the two countries.

Is a showdown now about to take place? It is reported from Warsaw that clamourous crowds are demanding a showdown with Lithuania. But a Polish thrust in the direction of Lithuania can by no means be taken for granted. But the very fact that such a move is even considered a possibility shows how grave are existing tensions in the Old World.

In Europe's present state of lawlessness, with force the principal and perhaps the only arbiter, certain nations are unquestionably tempted to make violence an instrument of national policy in the belief that now such action will not be opposed. The example set by Hitler with regard to Austria is naturally contagious.

The Wheeler Amendment.

The Senate debate on the Wheeler amendment to the reorganization bill tends to confirm an a priori belief that its passage would spell virtual defeat for the entire reorganization program.

In its present form the bill merely requires submission of an executive order to Congress, the order automatically becoming effective after a limited waiting period. The Wheeler amendment, however, would require Congressional approval by joint resolution of every executive order issued under the reorganization plan. As matters stand the only way Congress could block the execution of a specific order would be by passage of nullifying legislation. And such an act would, of course, be subject to a Presidential veto.

The real question at issue, therefore, is whether Congress is willing to bestow upon the President the large discretionary powers conferred upon him by the omnibus reorganization bill. And the answer depends primarily upon whether Congress is willing to trust the judgment of the Chief Executive in the rearrangement and consolidation of executive agencies. If such trust is lacking, the whole reorganization program should be abandoned. For it seems fairly obvious that if Congress reserves the right to pass upon every executive order entailing a shift of bureaus or executive functions, little if any progress will be made.

Charges are current that Senatorial votes have been captured for the Administration by promises not to disturb or change the status of this or that Federal agency. This well indicates the nature of the obstacles to effective, comprehensive reorganization arising when legislative wishes have to be consulted at every turn. The prolonged debate over the possible fate of the Forest Service provides further evidence of the turmoil that would result if Congress had to pass upon all executive orders entailing extensive changes in the administrative setup.

Senator O'Mahoney underlined the moral to be drawn from the wordy discussion over this single bureau. "Its significance as an agency of the Government was not involved at all," he said, indicating what would happen if the Wheeler amendment were adopted and every executive order made by the President reorganizing the Government catapulted back into both Houses of Congress. As Senator O'Mahoney further pointed out, if every reorganization order were subject to legislative review, Federal employes fearful of losing their jobs would descend upon Congress en masse. The result would "almost certainly be that no reorganization of any kind would be effected."

The proper way to curtail the President's power, if Congress considers the proposed grant of authority too great, is to provide for more careful statutory definition of the scope of the reorganization program. That has already been done to some extent. Under the revised bill the President cannot act to abolish executive functions or to create new ones. Moreover, he may not in any way interfere with a considerable number of important independent agencies.

Congress should make sure that it has set up statutory safeguards against changes it does not desire and has also laid down clear standards for executive guidance. To go beyond that is to exceed the legislative function. Certainly, if Congress were to pass upon each executive order dealing with regroupings or shifts of the executive agencies, it would have little time left for transacting regular business. And it is a foregone conclusion that when it had finished haggling over details, the measure of accomplishment would be virtually nil.

No Bonus Wanted.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

In interesting contrast with the insistent demands upon the Treasury by war veterans' organizations in this country, the Canadian Legion, in convention at Fort William, Ontario, has adopted a resolution opposing anything in the nature of a veterans' bonus. The action was taken following reports that "missionaries" were at work obtaining signatures to support a bonus demand upon the Canadian Parliament.

The resolution declares that the government's responsibility lies in caring for the disabled, their dependents and the dependents of the fallen, and for those who, having seen service in a theater of actual war, are now unable, owing to factors arising out of their service and of economic distress, to obtain employment.

Although the United States Government has assumed a responsibility for war veterans far beyond care of those whose ills rise from actual service, although it has paid a general bonus years before it was due, Congress is now being asked to pension widows and orphans of veterans whose passing bears no relation to service causes. This action is the prelude to a demand for general service pensions for all who wore the uniform.

From this side of the border, the action of the Canadian Legion seems to fit into the category of those remarkable happenings chronicled by Mr. Ripley.

The Pepper-Coffee Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The opinion held of WPA art is easily read in the editorial dealing with the fine arts bill in The Post March 6. The opinion is nowhere explicitly stated in the editorial, but its hostility is at least implied. What is stated is a characteristic journalistic somersault—a reading into the bill of an effort of labor to control the fine arts of this country. Such a conclusion is so ridiculous that it would not merit any notice if the issue at stake in this bill was not vital to the interest of the whole country.

This issue is nothing less than an intelligent awakening of the people of the United States who can be so awakened to the imperative need of some form of permanent Government subsidy for the fine arts. There is at present such a subsidy—the painting and sculpture section of the procurement division of the Treasury. This section provides mural work exclusively for buildings owned by Uncle Sam. Its scope is extremely limited and it can employ only a small fraction of the talent which will automatically go to waste with the end of the WPA grants for painting and sculpture alone. This section of the Treasury does not concern itself with any of the other fine arts. The Pepper-Coffee bill does: it includes them all on an equal basis, demanding not only the recognition of Congress but the recognition of every community in the United States.

There is not a single government in Europe which neglects to give some form of subsidy for the preservation and continuance of its cultural life. If the United States is to have any real cultural life in the future, and today, now is the time to consider it. Any review of the activities of the WPA units devoted to the fine arts ought to convince the most reactionary mind of its permanent value. Any mere reading of the names of nationally and internationally known American artists engaged in these activities ought to clinch the matter.

In the nature of things, no one can expect a perfect bill on such an issue. It is conceded that no such bill could ever be drafted that would have the approval of even all of the artists. But to talk of this bill in terms of union control in the very article which quotes it as giving to all of the artists of each community the right to select their supervisors is muddle-headed.

It is too bad to see The Post slipping into the tiresome attitude of "being agin the Government, whatever the Government might do."

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA ARTISTS UNION.
Washington, March 11.

Congressmen's Parking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post has been aroused by the illegal parking of cars by members of Congress.

I for one believe that a member of Congress certainly ought to be entitled to park his car when and where he sees fit, so long as he does not interfere with the rights of others. The parking right should be granted him out of respect for his office, and in consideration of the benefits to be derived from same.

If the District of Columbia expects an increase in its annual appropriation, together with other favors including the passage of laws for the District, why not co-operate with said members of Congress and give them a break if and when the occasion arises, instead of harassing them with trivial matters, which serve no other purpose than causing sores that may never heal.

The crime wave of today would not be near as large, in my opinion of course, if less time were devoted to traffic and more to the prevention of criminal acts and the apprehension of the culprits.

The Keys Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Regarding the regrettable shooting of Leroy Keys, colored World War veteran, may I say that in my opinion the officer involved, while acting hastily, performed his duty as he saw it.

If placed in similar circumstances, it is doubtful that those who condemn this officer so bitterly would act with better judgment. Furthermore, I can in no way see wherein this officer should be held responsible for the death of Keys when persons of unsound mind run at large. As long as this man, or any man who is proved to be of unsound mind, is allowed his unrestricted freedom, then society is not safe.

Let Congress revamp the laws covering mental cases and our law-enforcing body will not be confronted with conditions with which they are unfamiliar.

Mr. Hoover In Belgium.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My attention has been called to a letter signed "Puzzled" under the caption, "Letters to the Editor," in your issue of March 15, in which an unidentified individual makes derogatory and wholly erroneous assertions in regard to Herbert Hoover during the period when he was food administrator.

I can state without reservation that Herbert Hoover received no salary or remuneration of any description during his term of office as United States food administrator. He absolutely did not accept any traveling or other expense allowance. His services were rendered without financial compensation of any description. He did not go to Europe on behalf of the Food Administration to distribute food in Belgium; the relief work in Belgium was conducted by an entirely separate organization which did not utilize any of the funds appropriated to the Food Administration. Furthermore, in connection with the relief in Belgium and other relief work in Europe under Mr. Hoover's guidance, he accepted no salary and no expense account.

All of the above are matters of public record and can be readily verified.

Such erroneous statements by "Puzzled" are mean and despicable, and I am astonished that such a letter concerning a former President was permitted space in a reputable paper, and I assume that, as a matter of ordinary decency, you will publish immediate refutation. (Editor Note: This was done yesterday.)

I am in a position to speak with authority concerning these matters, as during the whole period of the Food Administration I was administrative assistant to Mr. Hoover.

Behind The Recession.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Because the excess-profits and capital-gains levies were in effect during the 1936 revival, Representative Schwellenbach assumes they are desirable and should be retained. I don't get this, nor his claim that collapse ensued because the Government clamped down on its spending spree, or the win-the-election fund petered out.

That '36 upturn started because 10,000,000 motor cars needed replacement. The major buying was done by those who could have bought sooner save for job-loss fears. Excessive savings occasioned by this fear had to find outlet. Lower interest charges and collected debts caused builders to resume operations. Add the factor of resultant employment upon retail buying, and a factor all too often ignored, all-round liquidation of private debts. Government spending in this situation strikes me as a point of weakness, not strength.

Many thinking people expected a momentary collapse during 1927-28. When this overdue phenomenon failed to end the "fool's paradise" they developed a philosophy of its indefinite delay, with the resultant beautiful crash attributed to Hoover by the political and economic seers who gained from it their present positions of power. Because the crash was stalled off until '29, is that reason to acclaim the manifold evils—installment payments, top-heavy wages, dumb spending, lack of thrift and overborrowing, to name but a few—which preceded it?

If the answer is "yes" then Representative Schwellenbach is right and these punitive levies, throttling a recovery which must start again from the bottom, should be retained.

As a small businessman I would paraphrase the Reds and say: "Down with these repressive tax laws. Down with the new Government spending." All needed to put the country on its feet again, and in short order, is a sane attitude toward business by Government. President Roosevelt's court plan, and high-handed manner of its presentation, started this recession; he can now do no less than allow business freedom to repair the mess he has created.

The District's Fiscal Dilemma.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A repetition of last year appears in store for the taxpayers of the District of Columbia.

At that time months of discussion took place and Congress gave us the business privilege tax plus other increases but failed to live up to the 60-40 plan for division of District expenses.

This year much discussion has been had. What we shall get is anybody's guess. It is stated that Congress will this year repeal the 60-40 plan.

While estimates of untaxed Government property run as high as 33 1-3 per cent let us, for the sake of argument, agree it is 25 per cent. On top of this we have embassies and legations not subject to tax.

Our city, due to its nature, is known as a retail city and not a manufacturing city. Aside from Government employes our next largest employers are the utilities companies. In cities where large manufacturing predominates, it is those large industries that provide the tax and income to the city. Our Federal Government is in a measure similar to the large manufacturers.

A study of the income tax paid to the Federal Government by the citizenry of the District shows we pay a greater tax than many States, but the allocation for relief by Congress gives States that pay a lesser amount in a tax a greater consideration than we here in the District enjoy.

When laws are created the citizens have to obey the law or suffer the consequences. Congress, on the other hand, has set a wonderful example by flouting the law when it appropriates $5,000,000 to a $48,000,000 budget, creating to itself a $7,000,000 saving at the expense of the citizens of the District of Columbia—said saving based on a 25 per cent basis instead of 40 per cent.

Has any attempt been made to go to the Court of Claims and sue for the funds that the law specifically stated was due as, namely, 40 per cent of our budget requirements?

How long are the citizens going to take it on the chin? I have heard for months that a mass march would be made on Congress by the citizens demanding what is justly theirs by law, but it appears some one has gotten cold feet or else has been bought over by the politicians.

What outstanding citizen or business group will sponsor this march, which should be orderly and in keeping with the dignity of the city and its citizens?

Other groups have come here with their demands and we have had to bear the expense of policing and, at times, feeding these groups. It is about time we think of ourselves and demand what is rightfully ours by law.

Ice In Vienna.

OUR train was due to arrive at Vienna's West Station at 7 o'clock that Sunday evening, but it was already a few minutes past and the suburbs were only beginning to close in around the tracks. Standing beside me in the corridor, a German exile, still proud of his fatherland's efficiency, spoke wearily, "You're in Austria now. Nothing's on time."

I was tired, too. Barnstorming through the Austrian Alps, our ice hockey team had played five games in five nights in as many different towns. When Herr Goldner, secretary of the Austrian Ice Hockey Association, ran down the Vienna station platform to make us welcome in the capital, I asked him if there would still be time to get tickets for the opera.

"There would be," he said politely, "but I have scheduled a friendly little practice game for you tonight." Our opponents in the friendly little game turned out to be the Austrian trial Olympic team. Time has gently rubbed from my memory the exact statistics of the rout. I do remember that between periods our Canadian goal guard recognized one of the Olympic athletes as an acquaintance from Montreal and the two effected some sort of gentlemen's agreement to govern scoring during the rest of the game.

But we had been billed in Vienna as "The World Famous Oxford Ice Hockey Players" and the cash customers had no way of knowing we were only the second team. One of the Monday morning papers, linking our performance of the previous night with a defeat suffered in Prague by our first team, carried a scathing editorial, indignantly if somewhat irrelevantly entitled "Where Is Oxford?" The burden of the article was that Oxford's first team must be living well at St. Moritz, while sending out this wretched band of stooges to fill its engagements.

After reading this magnificent blast, Herr Goldner grew pale and excited because his files held several letters in which our secretary had plainly pointed out that we were the second team and nothing more. Hastening to the newspaper office to avert any international incident, he explained that we were not impostors. Tuesday morning the journal carried a handsome apology under the caption, "Our Oxford Friends."

Our first time-table had called for only two games and three days in Vienna before we resumed our round of the provinces. But when the Graz team wrote that their only rink had melted, Herr Goldner promptly arranged for us another match on Vienna's artificial ice. With the thaw spreading through southern Austria, Klagenfurt and then Leoben canceled their games, and each time we prolonged our stay in the capital by another 48 hours.

The constant expectation that we should be leaving Vienna at any moment and the repeated postponement of the departure colored those days by the Danube with a curious blend of gayety and unreality. And that was as it should be, according to Walter, the small and graceful Viennese who showed us his city. In his late twenties, Walter was a perennial university student, living on the income from a small estate, dabbling in law, medicine and archeology.

"You see, you have your ice in Vienna today," he told me. "But tonight it may freeze out in the mountains, and then you'll have to leave in the morning. That's the way everything is in Austria—ice hockey and business and politics. Something freezes here, something melts there. We don't have anything to do with it, but it means everything to us. We don't know where we must go tomorrow, so tonight we pretend it's a holiday."

With Walter for guide, we pretended well. I have forgotten the names of all the night clubs except the little basement called "Noah's Ark" where the waitress told me with pride I was sitting in the very corner the Prince of Wales had chosen a year ago. And the manager told me, a little reproachfully, I thought, how much champagne the prince had ordered.

There were the glittering shops of the Karnterstrasse and the elegant cafes where waiters swiftly judged the patron's political complexion and brought the appropriate newspaper. There were shrines to the martyred Chancellor Dollfuss on street corners and in public buildings—a glass-inclosed photograph, a holly wreath and a burning candle. There were the shell-pitted walls of the Karl Marx Hof, where workers had manned machine guns in the windows of their model flats and briefly defied the government's suppression of the Socialist Party. It was when we stood beside the Karl Marx Hof that Walter, suddenly serious, came closest to expression of a political credo. He simply said, "It is a terrible thing to be an Austrian."

That night we heard the ice had frozen at Kitzbuhel in the Tyrol. Walter came down to the station to see us off the next morning. We joked a little and, reverting to our old metaphor, I told Walter I hoped he would always find ice in Vienna. His last Christmas card showed a Viennese skating scene; I am beginning to wonder about the next.

Fair Enough

She Knows The Country Best.

San Francisco.

MRS. ROOSEVELT came to San Francisco from Los Angeles by train to deliver her lecture on peace at the very hour when the heads of the bulldog editions were yelling "Hitler Defies the World!" "France Threatens War on Germany!" She arrived at noon and was taken over the usual jumps by the inevitable committee. Her chores included an appearance on the grounds of the 1939 World's Fair, where she sat on a tractor and went through the motions of turning the first gouge of ground for a Federal building.

PEGLER.

Some time during the day she had to turn out her syndicate copy, and presumably she took a few practice swings before her mirror at the hotel before advancing to the pulpit in the civic auditorium to say her say on a subject which, in the present state of the world, only a brave and honest person would attempt. She spoke for an hour and 15 minutes to a crowd almost entirely made up of people over the combatant war age and then left by another night train for Fresno.

It had been another routine day in the life of one who is stingily described as the "most remarkable" and "most energetic" woman of her time in this country, but who deserves more than that. I think we can take the wraps off and call her the greatest American woman, because there is no other who works as hard or knows the low-down truth about the people and the troubles in their hearts as well as she does.

And for what reason? Mrs. Roosevelt doesn't give a damn about politics in the partisan sense. Profit? She is one member of the family who will not have a dollar of profit to show for eight or more years of banging around the country on a schedule that would break the body and mind of an old-time circus trouper.

• • • •

THERE WAS no style about her audience for the lecture on peace. Undoubtedly there were some mere fans and some more or less deserving Democrats, but the spirit of the gathering—if it is possible to describe a spirit—was one of earnest hope for some cheerful news, some discovery of a formula that would touch the soul of the monster who had just kidnaped a whole country in Europe and threatened to kidnap another as soon as he got his wind.

Of course, the Communists were out, as usual, trying to thumb a ride. Outside the hall they were distributing a tract by Earl Browder advocating cooperation of the peaceful countries.

With the Moscow slaughterhouse to boycott the Reich and Italy and in the hour of victory leave Russia a great military power and her colleagues pushover for the Browders, the Soviet Union, he said, is fully prepared to defend herself, but "preparedness" for this country he ridiculed as warlike and reactionary.

• • • •

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S effort is the more creditable because she works in the straitjacket of diplomatic and political restraints. Many tempting weapons and arguments lie just out of her reach, because, obviously, she cannot mention Hitler or Germany or go into the particulars of international disputes in the situation. Standing before an unsightly and ragged bit of scenery intended to represent either a peacock's fan or an iridescent clam shell, she nevertheless got home her argument that peace now is not the exclusive business of some distant thing called government but the personal concern and duty of every individual who must be affected by war.

How peace, then? Well, by tolerance, by the sacrifice of minor differences, by a sincere effort to know and respect the good in other people, by teaching the kids in the family circle to get on together without resort to fists on the slightest provocation.

Futile, perhaps, and even silly and pathetic to realists was Mrs. Roosevelt's argument. Nevertheless, it followed the line of truth, for all other formulas think of peace through war, which has never succeeded yet, except Browder's—which is, of course, a trap. She has been taking elocution lessons, for she is inclined to whoop, but her speech is improving and the electrical gimmick doesn't sink and crackle when she speaks as it does for most women orators.

Mrs. Roosevelt has been before us for five years now. We know her better than any other woman, and she knows the country better than any other individual, including her husband, and the profit is all on our side.

The Vernal Season.

O spring is tripping down the way—
The signs are here and there:
A robbin's in the yard today—
Next week a polar bear.

Unfailing omens do we see
No matter where we peek;
All nature plays a rhapsody—
Its tongue within its cheek.

The snow trains swiftly disappear,
The skiers drop their skis,
The organ-grinder's tune we hear . . .
(Beg pardon, while I sneeze!)

The gloomiest break into song—
The plants begin to grow . . .
I do not think it would be wrong
To look tonight for snow!

Carl Hubbell finds his pitching arm,
We hear of Dizzy Dean . . .
This morning it was sweet and warm
Tomorrow frost is seen.

And gambol in the sun,
As pop forgets he's old and fat
And bellows "Throw me one!"

The overcoat is put away—
We hear of daffodils,
The German bands begin to play . . .
(And, boy, have I the chills!)

In Congress silly notions roam;
We hear of Pilsner brew—
As Mrs. Harkness reaches home
And brings that panda, too!

The fancy skaters break and flee,
Which seems, oh, very nice,
And no one has a yen to see
A ballet on the ice.

The office windows open are—
It feels a little hot,
We leave the big front door ajar . . .
(Tomorrow we will not!)

I feel as playful as a pup
And sing hi lee, hi lo!
Miss Toopsey, call my doctor up—
That cold is back, I know!

Russia's Peace Bid

Soviet Government Through Maxim Litvinoff Urges Co-operative Action To Prevent Threatened World War.

Editor's note: The following is the complete English text of the statement to the press made by Maxim M. Litvinoff, Soviet commissar of foreign affairs in Moscow yesterday.

HAVING JOINED the League of Nations for the purpose of organized co-operation with other peace-loving countries the Soviet Government has never missed a suitable occasion to recommend the most effective guarantees of peace which it his seen in the organization of the system of collective security within the framework of the League of Nations as well as in regional pacts of mutual assistance against aggressors.

The Soviet government followed this path in practice when it concluded such pacts with France and Czechoslovakia, pacts, which, in the absence of aggression, do not menace any country whatsoever. The violations of those international obligations which derive from the Covenant of the League of Nations and from the Kellogg-Briand Paris Pact, as well as the attacks on some states by other states which have occurred in the course of the past four years provided occasions for the Soviet government to demonstrate not only its condemnation of these international crimes but also its readiness to take an active part in all measures aiming at the organization of a collective repulse of the aggressor even disregarding the inevitable prejudice to its relations with the aggressor.

At the same time the Soviet government voiced warnings that international inaction and impunity of aggression in one case would inevitably lead to the repetition and multplication of similar cases.

Armed Invasion Of Austria Cited As Proof.

UNFORTUNATELY the international developments have justified these warnings. They received a new confirmation in the armed invasion of Austria and in the forcible deprivation of the Austrian people of their political, economic and cultural independence.

While formerly cases of aggression occurred on continents more or less remote from Europe or on the outskirts of Europe and affected, along with the interests of the victim of aggression, the interests of only a few countries situated in the immediate proximity, this time the violence has been perpetrated in the center of Europe and has created an undeniable menace not only for the 11 countries now contiguous with the aggressor but also for all European states, and not only European.

Thus far the menace has been directed against the territorial integrity and against the political, economic and cultural independence of small nations, but the inevitable enslavement of these countries will create bases for pressure and even for attacks against large states as well.

Danger Of New Aggressions Real.

IN THE first place arises the menace to Czechoslovakia, but owing to the contagious character of aggression the danger threatens to grow later on into new international conflicts, and this already manifests itself in the alarming situation which has arisen on the Polish-Lithuanian frontier.

The present international situation places before all peace-loving states, and the great powers in particular, the question of their responsibility for the destinies of the peoples of Europe, and not of Europe alone. The Soviet government, being cognizant of its share in this responsibility, being also cognizant of its obligations under the Covenant of the League of Nations and the Kellogg-Briand Pact, as well as under the treaties of mutual assistance concluded with France and Czechoslovakia, I can state on its behalf that on its part it is ready as before to participate in collective action which would be decided upon jointly with it and which would aim at checking the further development of aggression and at eliminating the aggravated danger of a new world massacre.

It is prepared immediately to take up, in the League of Nations or outside of it, deliberation with other powers on practical measures which the circumstances demand. Tomorrow may be too late, but today time for it is not yet gone if all states, and the great powers in particular, take a firm and unambiguous stand on the problem of the collective salvation of peace."

Flags Waved As Picketers' Case Is Heard

'Red-Blooded Americanism' Cries Fill Court at Embassy Case Trial.

"Snow White" was still playing Washington, but the best show in town yesterday was in Police Court, where actual flag-waving, oratorical flights about "red-blooded Americanism" and pleas for divine aid for Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown entertained a standing-room-only court.

The case up for hearing involved the arrest of 39 persons Monday for violating a month-old law by picketing the Austrian Legation and German Embassy. Yesterday the American Civil Liberties Union concentrated all its talent to prove the law unconstitutional, while District Attorney David A. Hart argued in favor of the statute. After two hours, Judge Edward M. Curran took the case under advisement, saying he would give a decision in a few days.

Hart maintained that the law did not involve an unconstitutional delegation of power, holding that the statute set up adequate standards by which the superintendent of police could allow or prevent picketing of embassies, and that the question of foreign affairs was far different from one involving purely domestic matters.

In his argument, the district attorney frequently pounded out the words "red-blooded Americanism" and hinted at the patriotism of anyone who opposed the law. At one stage, he said members of the American Civil Liberties Union "are attempting to hide behind the Constitution that—by their own unlawful and unconstitutional acts—they are attempting to tear down."

Col. Julius I. Peyser, defense attorney, jumped to his feet, clutching a dozen small flags in his hands. Waving a replica of the 1776 "Don't Tread On Me" flag so that the whole courtroom could see, he asked:

"Do you recognize that?"

When there was no answer, he went through the collection, one by one.

Included in the group were half a dozen early American flags, the present emblem and the flags of the Allies in the World War. With each wave, Peyser referred to his war record, his colonelcy in the Army, and the American Civil Liberties Union's "red-blooded Americanism."

Actually, only two defendants—James Lerner and Ruben Myers—are represented in the demurrer. The other 37 are expected to plead guilty, these two cases being prepared for appeals in case the decision is unfavorable.

Death Of A City

By Harold Larson

The Viennese Twilight.

VIENNA HAS FALLEN and with its fall have been lost a culture and a way of life that the world may never know again. For centuries the former Austrian capital stood as a bulwark against the East. In 1529 it resisted siege by the Sultan Sulaiman the Magnificent; in 1683, with the aid of the valiant Sobieski, it turned back the Moslem Turks, saved Europe for the Cross. Beyond Vienna, said Metternich, Asia began. This was the last outpost of the civilization known as Europe.

But as recent events have amply shown, the old Vienna, the seat of the once proud Hapsburgs, is no more. In its place have come Hitler, the swastika, frenzy and fanaticism, suicide and despair. Gone is the gayety and romance of a world in waltz time. Gone are the Hapsburgs who for 700 years ruled in pomp and splendor. Their lovely palaces, their massive monuments remain, but much like museums speaking only of what is dying or already dead. This is the theme of Edward Crankshaw's "Vienna: The Image of a Culture in Decline."

Hardly a guide book and not a history, this is an effort to describe the culture whose death gasp we heard the other day. With rare appreciation Crankshaw describes the delights of the Viennese coffeehouse, "where one may sit hour after hour for the price of a single drink, reading, talking, or considering what to do next—an occupation so pleasant that the temptation is to do nothing at all." This amiable people, the Viennese, have one vice, Schlamperei, a sort of "easy-going spirit," which is "something quite charming, frequently annoying, ultimately disastrous and forever catching its victims unawares." Perhaps this explains in part why a people who stemmed the tide of Turk and Slav succumbed with barely a shudder to the Nazis.

BUT THE TRAGEDY of Vienna can not be comprehended without its leitmotif, the House of Hapsburg. A landowning family, it began with the able Rudolf and ended with the pathetic Franz Josef and Karl. "God," said the aged Franz Josef, "has spared me nothing." Yet God did spare him the humiliation of 1918, the abdication of the last Hapsburg monarch. The Hapsburg dynasty had its share, the author intimates, of "the softness of the Viennese, their willingness to resign themselves to every powerful evil as irremediable, their gayety masking a sort of chronic despair or helplessness, their lack of intellectual tenacity." Nor must it be forgotten that under the Hapsburgs Hitler spent his formative years.

There is both sadness and beauty in this book, revealed in superb prose and depicted in excellent photographs—the latter being probably the last such that will be "reproduced by permission of the Austrian State Travel Bureau." The churches of St. Stephen, St. Michael, of the Capuchins; the palaces, the Hofburg, Schonbrunn with its 1,441 rooms, Belvedere (where Schuschnigg was reported under "protective arrest"); the park called the Prater, where now presumably Jews will dare sit only upon marked benches—all these are described with a delicate touch. It is significant, indicates Crankshaw, that Arthur Schnitzler and Sigmund Freud were the last Viennese men of genius. Truly the portrait of a decadence.

• • • •

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN, and written, of course, before the absorption of Austria into the Third Reich, this volume is in a sense a challenge to the British people whose capital, London, is alleged to have "the soul of a sixpenny store." England is compared to the Austrian Queen, Maria Theresa, who "perjured herself and lost her country's honor in ceaseless efforts to keep the peace." Vienna is gone, London "still lives somehow," for we have something Vienna does not possess—"freedom of the mind." But, he concludes, "we may not keep it much longer; all over Europe bigotry and superstition rears its cobra head."

"VIENNA: THE IMAGE OF A CULTURE IN DECLINE," by Edward Crankshaw. (Macmillan, $3.)

Magnificent Legend

By Richard Adloff

IT IS A PITY that Mr. Bramwell's musings on the problem of the lost island-continent of Atlantis do not maintain the mood of poetic and imaginative beauty that marks the first two pages of his introduction. The opening paragraph deserves quotation:

"The name Atlantis has a sad sound. If it is pronounced ringingly, giving the first two syllables their full consonantal resonance and allowing the final sibilant to fall softly from the tongue, the effect seems to evoke an image of the surge and hiss of huge waves breaking over submerged rocks to spend themselves in white ocean foam. Atlantis is a grand name, majestic and solemn-sounding like the opening bars of Debussy's La Cathedrale Engloutie, and it contains in its associations with the Atlas Mountains and the Atlantic Ocean the collossal reflection of the Titan, the son of Oceanides, supporting the heavens upon his shoulders."

• • • •

THOUGH THE REST of his book is well written and interesting, as befits the cultured Englishman, Mr. Bramwell quickly subordinates the poetic to the practical, and sets himself the onerous task of sifting a residue of credibility from the enormous and piebald mass of myths and legends and fantastic theories that in the course of centuries have attached themselves to the challenging name of Atlantis.

What was Atlantis, and did it, in fact, exist at all? These are questions that have excited men's speculations for hundreds of years, and the attempts to answer them have been set down in huge numbers of books and monographs, ranging from Plato's "Critias" to quaint theosophical elaborations in our own day.

Most of us who have not delved into the maze of Atlantis lore respond to the name "Atlantis" by thinking vaguely of an ancient continent which formerly rose from the ocean, somewhere between Europe and America, and which disappeared in some cataclysm of which only a dim race-memory remains. Plato holds to this theory, in the "Critias"—but fertile imaginations have placed the vanished land and civilizaion in such various and unlikely seeming spots as Crete, northern Africa, and the southwestern coast of Spain, beyond the Straits of Gibraltar (the "Pillars of Hercules" of the ancients).

In the present volume, Mr. Bramwell attempts to sum up and revaluate the numerous conflicting theories, and does, in fact, present them all with the good researchman's impartiality. Fortunately, perhaps, for the dim magnificence of the legend, he doesn't arrive at anything that looks like conclusive evidence in favor of any one of the various schools of thought on the subject. Thus, the way remains open, as in the past, for unhampered exploitation of a provocative myth by novelists and pseudo-scientific investigators.

• • • •

"LOST ATLANTIS" is carefully documented, has a short but comprehensive index, and is typographically pleasing. It will have a strong appeal for everyone with leanings toward romantic archeology, and with a liking for oddities in human thought about man's past and the mystery of the vanishing of civilizations.

Roosevelt Tells I. C. C. to Frame Rail Program

vent a reorganization, and such procedures have been dragging interminably through the Federal courts.

One proposal was for establishment of a special tribunal, preferably as a division within the I. C. C. where controversies over reorganization of bankrupt roads might be reconciled. Amendment of the law to diminish the veto power of minority security holders also has been suggested.

The President's conference unanimously voiced the necessity for eliminating duplicating and wasteful railroad facilities. A widespread viewpoint among Government advisers is that consolidation or pooling of facilities must be made compulsory, but such a move is certain to have political repercussions.

Three-Man Board Considered.

Another suggestion is that Congress be asked to establish a three-man transportation board with virtual dictatorial authority to require consolidations and pooling of facilities.

Splawn said he supposed the President would lay his group's recommendations before the other 11 members of the railroad conference for discussion before any decision is made.

The ICC chairman said the matters which might figure in the recommendations were expediting reorganization of bankrupt roads; assistance to railroads under heavy financial pressure and possible establishment of machinery to bring about a long-range railroad program.

Big Saving Envisioned.

Splawn said that one participant in the conference had estimated possible savings of between $200,000,000 and $250,000,000 annually, but said that approximately 70 per cent of such economies would come from reducing labor costs. The conference earlier in the week, according to the President, indicated agreement that rail workers ousted as a result of the Government's activities to help the railroads should be protected by an annual pension, lump-sum dismissal wage or in some similar manner.

RFC Chairman Jesse Jones, one of the rail conference participants, said that his agency for some time had been conducting a study into the possibility of merging the Chicago & Northwestern and the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroads—both in bankruptcy.

Meanwhile, the Association of American Railways stated that reports from 91 Class 1 railroads showed operating revenues in February of $205,973,953, compared with $268,403,458 in February, 1937, and $351,111,482 in February, 1930. For these railroads operating revenue was down 23.3 per cent under February, 1937.

Wage Cuts to Be Weighed.

Chicago, March 17 (AP).—The Association of American Railroads meets here tomorrow to consider recommending wage reductions for approximately 1,000,000 employes.

The directors decided at a Washington parley last week to ask the 142 member roads to urge the workers to take a cut.

The brotherhoods obtained pay hikes totaling about $135,000,000 a year in negotiations last summer and fall.

The 750,000 members of the non-operating brotherhoods were granted wage increases of 40 cents a day, and the 250,000 members of the operating brotherhoods were given a 6.6 per cent boost in pay.

Since then, however, some carriers have reduced their forces.

During the 1932 depression the union workers took a 10 per cent slash. This was completely restored in 1935.

Counsel for SEC Scores Statement At Rail Hearing

By the Associated Press.

E. Forrest Tancer, Securities Commission counsel, yesterday said an amendment to a Missouri Pacific Railroad registration statement was a type of legalistic maneuver which "should be scornfully rejected by this commission."

He made this statement at a commission hearing to determine whether $153,000,000 of common and preferred stocks of the railroad should be suspended from the New York Stock Exchange on the grounds of "false and misleading" financial statements.

The commission has charged that the registration statement filed by the railroad failed to disclose an alleged liability of about $15,000,000.

Karl D. Loos, of Washington, counsel for the railroad, denied "there ever was anything more than a conditional liability." Loos said there was no basis for the commission's examination of the railroad "merely because it failed to show an alleged liability, which—if it ever existed—does not exist now."

Tick Experimenter

EDWARD FRANCIS.

Ticks, Hungry 7 Years, Give Monkey Fever

portant, occurrence in connection with the amazing survival of Ornithodoros turicata. When he was stricken ill last June and had to leave his ugly pets to enter the Marine Hospital in Baltimore, there were 21 ticks in individual pine boxes and 26 more in glass tubes, the latter packed in moist cotton.

They Can Live on Moisture.

Coming back to work eight months later, Dr. Francis found the boxed 21 alive—just as he had expected—but all except three of the other 26 were dead.

"This makes it appear all the more that the ticks can survive practically indefinitely on nothing but moisture," the scientist declared. "The pine boxes rest in sand, which is dampened from time to time. But the water in the cotton was not replenished and the bugs in the glass tubes probably died shortly after their blankets became dry."

Survivors Thriving.

The three ticks that did survive were transferred to the living colony and are now thriving. The ones which had been kept in tubes were offspring of the original Texas colonists. How three managed to cling to life while 23 died is a mystery.

Dr. Francis believes the pine box family will outlive him and has made provision in his will for continuation of the experiments. The 21 adult insects are divided into groups of five, seven and nine members. It was the seven-bug outfit, which gave another monkey relapsing fever in September, 1935, which Dr. Francis used on the animal now infected.

The ticks harbor a spirochete which is a cousin of the germ that causes syphilis. The fever which it produces is usually non-fatal in this country, though in certain parts of the world the disease may kill one in every two persons it attacks.

Because arsenicals are effective in treating syphilis, they were administered to Wr. Francis but he believes they had little to do with his recovery. He had eight fever relapses, occurring approximately 10 days apart.

Mrs. Lamberton Is Willed $300,000

Mrs. Helen C. Lamberton, wife of Benjamin P. Lamberton, of 2435 Kalorama road northwest, yesterday was named principal beneficiary of his $300,000 estate when his will was probated in District Court. Mr. Lamberton, an electrical engineer who died here February 27, also named her executrix.

In filing, the widow renounced her right to act as executrix, and asked that her son, Harry C. Lamberton, and son-in-law, Jennings Bailey, jr., son of the associate justice of District Court, be named instead.

High School Cadets To Begin Drilling Contests March 31

The annual competitive drills for Washington High School cadets will begin March 31 on the Central High School stadium, Col. Wallace M. Craigie, director of military science and tactics in District public schools, announced yesterday.

Battalions from the city's high schools will compete for a gold medal and a cup. The medal goes to the major of the winning battalion, and the cup to members of his unit.

Foes Are Losing Fight to Check Reorganization

Offices

Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, declared other Senators had been assured the Reclamation Bureau would not be transferred, while another Senator had been promised approval of a flood-control project for a change of stand on the bill. Senator Peter G. Gerry (Democrat), of Rhode Island, said he knew of at least one call to a Senator by Postmaster General James J. Farley.

Telegrams Ask Support.

On the floor, Senator Lynn J. Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, read several telegrams from North Dakota town and county officials asking support for the reorganization bill "so we can have WPA" projects in North Dakota next year.

"Evidently," said Frazier, "those in charge of WPA in my State have taken it upon themselves to say WPA work would be stopped if this bill is not passed."

"What they meant," interjected Wheeler, "was that they would be cut off from WPA work if you didn't vote for this bill."

Frazier said he did not like the idea of using "this sort of propaganda" and "misleading information" in support of a bill.

Says Pledges Were Broken.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, said that promises and assurances given by the Administration when the economy act was passed in 1933 were "ruthlessly broken."

Vandenberg was challenged by Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, when he said he had heard the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation might be dismantled if the reorganization bill passed. Connally expressed doubt the President had any such intention.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, tangled with Vandenberg when the Michigan Senator read a letter from a veteran expressing fear that "veterans' preference" laws under civil service will be ignored under the reorganization set-up. Byrnes said Senate Majority Leader Barkley will offer an amendment assuring veterans of their preference in civil service appointments, but said the bill clearly safeguarded them.

Many Letters Received.

Senator Clark, former national commander of the American Legion, said he has received hundreds of letters from veterans and their organizations, asking that the Veterans Administration be exempted from reorganization or transfer of functions. Byrnes replied that he knew of no effort to transfer Veterans Administration functions. He objected to exempting the agency "because every other agency would ask the same thing and we would get no reorganization."

Senator Minton's move for lobby committee investigation of activities against the reorganization bill apparently was designed as an answer to charges of Administration lobbying for the bill.

The lobby committee last week issued a subpena for Charles Dunwoody, of the California Chamber of Commerce and other organizations, allegedly seeking defeat of the bill. The subpena was canceled almost immediately and the hearing called off.

Secretary to Appear.

The National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, whose secretary was asked to appear before the Lobby Committee this morning, is sponsored by Frank E. Gannett, publisher. The organization was reputedly active in the successful fight to sidetrack the reorganization bill last summer.

Minton issued the subpenas after Senator Connally announced receipt of a letter asking him to "telegraph your Senator" to oppose the bill. He said the letter was signed by Gannett.

Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, yesterday told the Senate he would vote against the Wheeler amendment because only by delegating authority to the President could any reorganization be effected. He denied the President would attempt "such a senseless thing" as transfer of TVA to any other bureau.

Under the Administration bill, the President's reorganization orders would become effective after 60 days unless specifically disapproved by Congress. The Wheeler amendment would reverse the process, and require both Houses of Congress to approve the orders by joint resolutions, before they became effective.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Fun, Facts and Folks.

The reorganization bill moves from development to development, and satisfactorily, mostly, to Jacob Baker, president of the U. F. W. A. . . . Yesterday he made public a letter written earlier this month to Senator Byrnes, which stated in part:

"In our judgment the essential thing is that the classified civil service on the one hand, and that part of the Federal service that is under the salary-classification statute on the other, shall be expanded to include the whole civilian personnel of the Government. The important thing is that the civil service shall be efficiently administered . . .

"The administration of civil service laws and rules is performed by an extensive executive staff, both within the departments and within the civil service agency itself. In our view it is not of vital importance whether the head of the civil service agency shall be a single administrator or a commission. We recognize that there are many advantages in a single administrator that result from identified and exactly placed responsibility, and that such an administrator may be held wholly responsible for the effective administration of his agency . . .

"However, we do not feel that it is of vital importance whether the head of such an agency shall be one man or a commission of three. The essential thing is that responsibility shall be clearly defined and the administration maintained at the highest possible level . . ."

The point has been made, he continued, that a bipartisan commission may protect the nonpartisan quality of the civil service more effectively than a single person. "In our judgment this finally comes down to the idea that a single minority member can protect the nonpartisan quality of the service more effectively than a single administrator . . .

"Essentially, the function of the head of the civil service agency is to lay out broad policies, and to establish the basic rules of administration. Political pressures are brought to bear upon the staff, and the pressures are just as great whether the staff is under a commission or a single individual . . ."

In little of which we concur—but all the same would die for Jacob Baker's right to say it.

We learn from inside sources that the principal kick the Labor Department's A. F. G. E. members had about the department's cafeteria food was the excessive quantities of mayonnaise placed on the sandwiches. The revolt against mayonnaise was started by one individual, who detested mayonnaise so violently that he talked of it widely in the department, finally drawing a circle of revolters against mayonnaise about him. From this agitation, the "survey" was made, which resulted in some 300 or more complaints generally about the food.

But, it is interesting to note, the cafeteria has been filled to capacity every time we've been over there, mayonnaise or no dressing at all.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Defender Squanders His Opportunity.

It is popularly supposed that the master player is one whose errors are few and far between. Of course, this is a true picture but not a complete one, by any means. The word "error" as applied to bridge, after all, must be used in a comparative sense. There are a great many players who do not habitually make out-and-out mistakes, but this does not necessarily qualify them for mastership. In the hand below, for example, East did not commit any actual bridge crime. He did, however, fail in ingenuity at a crucial point.

East, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.

	♠ A J 10 5 ♡ 9 8 3 ◇ K Q J 10 ♣ 7 2
♠ Q 6 2 ♡ 7 ◇ 9 8 5 4 3 2 ♣ Q 10 5	North West East South	♠ K 8 3 ♡ Q 6 4 ◇ A 7 ♣ K J 9 4 3
	♠ 9 7 4 ♡ A K J 10 5 2 ◇ 6 ♣ A 8 6

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	Double	2 N T	Double
Pass	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

The bidding is recorded as it actually occurred, and it must not be thought that I approve of West's psychic tactics.

West opened the five of clubs which, among experts, is considered an alternative lead to the top of partner's suit when holding three to an honor. There are at times certain advantages to this lead, but it worked out badly on this particular occasion. East put up the king, and declarer won. Declarer's next two plays were not well thought out. He laid down the ace and king of hearts, hoping to drop the queen. When it did not fall, he was in difficulty. Now he belatedly led the singleton diamond to dummy's ten. East won, and went into a long "huddle." Here was his problem: He could count declarer's heart suit but could not be sure whether declarer had started with ace and one club or ace and two. If the latter were the case it would be an easy matter to lay down the heart queen, taking out dummy's remaining trump, and then lead the jack and a low club. (The opening lead virtually marked West with the club queen.) If, however, declarer's hand had included only the ace and one club, this defense would be fatal since, after East's queen of hearts was out of the way, declarer would be able to discard spades on dummy's diamonds. Thus, if declarer had only two clubs, winning defense demanded that the spade ace be removed from dummy while East retained his heart in order to stop the run of the diamond suit. East arbitrarily decided that West must have had four clubs and, therefore, adopted a plan based on that premise.

Retaining the heart queen, he led a low club, and then it was all over. West won with the ten and shifted to a spade. Declarer won with the ace and discarded a spade on the diamond king, then led the diamond queen. East ruffed with the high trump, and declarer got rid of his other losing spade, finally ruffing his third club with dummy's remaining trump.

One slight change of plays would have led East, unerringly, to the correct defense. If, instead of leading a low club after winning with the diamond ace, he had laid down the club jack, the card that his partner played in following would have told him whether or not declarer had started with three clubs. The ten falling on the jack would have guided East to laying down the heart queen and then collecting another club trick for the setting trick.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Phones are ringing at all hours in the Capital, old cronies on the Hill or out in the States are ringing up old cronies in the Government executive offices, asking confidently for favors for their constituents, and usually getting them.

Jack Garner
. . . symbol

* * * *

Behind the chromium-trimmed, modernistic facade of the New Deal, all complete with new-fangled murals and idealists, the game of politics goes on according to Hoyle . . .

"Why! I and him had a grand binge together out at Frisco in 1920!" reminisces a statesman. "He'll do anything I ask him." Which, within limits, is true.

* * * *

A sort of briny, piratical, hard-boiled sentimentality plays a tremendous part in practical government. Between men who carried the torch for Democracy during the 12 lean years there are bonds of affection stronger than steel and almost as immune to rust

"—they carried the torch."

Phrases like "He's regular!" or "He's good troops!" are still the highest praise among the grizzled old guard behind the New Dealers.

And in the gossip of Washington political veterans, no phrase is more damning than "He won't stay hitched."

* * * *

Napoleon always had a soft spot in his heart for the Old Guard who were with him at Lodi and in his early battles. The White House doesn't forget the stalwarts of the days when Roosevelt was a forlorn hope candidate for the Vice Presidency, nor the Roosevelt-before-the-convention grenadiers, where a Guffey and a Harry Hopkins march together.

* * * *

I'm not sure whether Jack Garner now ranks as a Roosevelt-before-the-conventioner . . . He is a sort of combination quarterback, symbol, coach and cheerleader for a bevy of mellow, hard-bitten, companionable, profane, Democrats-before-the-convention, all archsentimentalists who rather fancy themselves devoid of sentiment.

* * * *

They gather in the Vice President's office now and again for highly important conferences. The legend insists these often takes the form of poker games—just because a statesman's voice occasionally announces "I'll take three . . ." To some of them the Baltimore convention of 1912 is as vivid as the Chicago convention of 1932.

"—idealism with a wink."

Some of them were running for Governor or the House or Senate, or acting as delegates or party chairmen or committeemen when these activities were just a labor of love . . . There is the same sentimental comraderie between them that exists between Spanish war vets who fought in the Philippines, or members of a legion post.

* * * *

Despite the abstemious Y. M. C. A. example of Jim Farley, who is a sort of liaison man between the old Democrats and the new, the typical sentimental old politician is no teetotaler. Some of them, in fact, can't quite remember every drink they ever took . . . They regard a teetotaler with a little more suspicion than an excessive bibber.

* * * *

Their political ideal is (1) an old so-and-so (affectionately speaking) who (2) will stay hitched and who (3) "you can always tell where he's at and where he stands," but who (4) doesn't mind a little drink now and then and who (5) has been through the mill and knows what it's all about, but who (6) doesn't get stinko too often and (7) doesn't sound off too much but who (8) will play ball with the boys.

* * * *

Most of them have grown older during the 12 lean years of Republicanism . . / Some come from States where 40 lean years dated back to Cleveland's last term . . . Now they know prosperity; they have been in the saddle 13 of the last 25 years . . . It's no longer easy to nominate for President a man over 60, or even much beyond 50 . . . Their Presidential timber is mostly in its 40's . . . As practical politicians, they have twice in 25 years elevated idealists into the White House . . . And they are ready to do it again; but you can't stop them from exchanging an occasional wink as they do it; they'll be damned if they'll confess any idealism.

Health Clinic Musters Aid In Congress

Hospitals Assailed for Barring Aides of Co-op Group.

Mustering full strength in defense of its activities, Group Health Association yesterday called on its friends in Congress for support in its life-or-death struggle with the District Medical Society.

First volley on Capitol Hill came from Representative Byron N. Scott (Democrat,) of California, who indorsed GHA in a statement for the Record and indicated he will take the floor soon to rake the American Medical Association for its opposition to the Washington group medicine plan.

Staff Physician Expelled.

At the same time Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, said:

"A group of citizens has every right to organize a program to protect its health. It should not be discriminated against."

Voorhis asserted he will amplify his position for the Record today.

Meanwhile, at headquarters of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, whose gift of $40,000 led to establishment of Group Health Association here last November, it was learned that GHA officials may demand that the District Medical Society proceed against certain of its members in the same manner that it disciplined Dr. Mario Scandiffio.

Workers File Protest.

Dr. Scandiffio, a member of the GHA medical staff, was expelled from the society Wednesday night. HOLC officials who are defending the group health plan believe that Dr. Scandiffio's position was no different in principle from that of numerous other doctors who are still in the society's good standing.

In a letter to Dr. Thomas E. Neill, president of the District Medical Society, Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers of America, protested the expulsion vote.

Another letter, addressed to Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the of the Community Chest, criticized member hospitals for their blacklisting of GHA physicians and surgeons. Baker urged that such institutions be dropped from Chest membership.

Post Staff Photos.

D. C. Revenue Bill Nearly Completed

The House sub-committee on fiscal affairs is scheduled to meet today and complete work on the District revenue bill before reporting to the House District Committee.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, yesterday assailed foes of the income tax and particularly the arguments of Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, who asked the sub-committee to return to the business privilege tax.

"If some folks spent as much time boosting the District as they do in seeking to dictate a tax bill that will put the burden on the other fellow," he said, "the District would be the most congenial place in the land."

Attorney Fighting Charges of Theft

James J. Laughlin, Washington attorney on trial in District Court for larceny, attempted yesterday to show by testimony of prosecution witnesses that he turned over to them the money he is accused of appropriating.

The three witnesses, Erma Miller, an attractive blonde, Walter C. Johnsen, and Edward R. Dietrich, told investigators they had turned over slightly more than $2,000 to Laughlin to obtain their release on bond following their arrest here in June, 1936. The charge against them was later dropped.

Washington Irish Celebrate St. Patrick's Day With Fetes

With diplomats and Congressmen attending, the Ancient Order of Hibernians began the day with a mass at St. Patrick's Church, celebrated by Msgr. C. F. Thomas. D. C. Post No. 17, Irish War Veterans, witnessed two direct descendants of Commodore John Barry, early American seafighter place a wreath on his monument in Franklin Square.

Members of the Post stood at attention as Miss Virginia Barry and George L. Tracy placed the wreath at the base of the statute. They also listened to brief speeches by Representatives Edith Nourse Rogers, (Republican), of Massachusetts; Lawrence J. Connery, (Democrat), of Massachusetts and Frank W. Towney, jr., (Democrat), of New Jersey. Later members of the post placed a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington.

At the Women's City Club, the American Legion Auxiliary and Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary, with four state societies, held a St. Patrick's Day dinner and dance last night. Mary O'Toole presided, with Michael M. Doyle and Joseph Morgan speakers.

The Friendly Sons of St. Patrick celebrated with a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel last night, with Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, and Presiding Judge Finis J. Garrett, of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, heading the list of speakers.

"Grogan's Eviction," a play by Thomas Brahany and Dennis Connell, featured the evening. Included in the cast were Maj. Charles E. Tittman, Fred East, William Raymond, Lawrence Downey, Bernard Fitzgerald, Edwin Steffe, George H. O'Connor and Daniel J. O'Brien.

At a banquet and dance at the Mayflower, the Ancient Order of Hibernians heard Mgr. Peter Guilday as principal speaker. Among those in charge of arrangements were Patrick O'Dea, Miss Theresa Collins, Mrs. Joseph A Daly, M. E. Buckley, Michael Dowd, James Conlin, Miss Lillian Faye, Daniel Donohue and Frank Raffert.

Two St. Patrick's Day dances were held later in the evening. At the Willard Hotel, the Irish War Veterans celebrated the birthday, while the United Irish Club gave a party at the Raleigh Hotel.

The Kiwanis Club celebrated St. Patrick's Day with a special Irish program at its luncheon meeting at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday. Thomas Brehenay acted as master of ceremonies and introduced the entertainers, George O'Connor, William Raymond and Lawrence Oowney.

Play Slated Tonight.

Luray, Va., March 17.—The senior class play "An Old Fashioned Girl," will be presented in the high school auditorium Friday night with Miss Maxine Stader, winner of the title "Miss Luray" last year in a beauty contest, in the title role.

Joseph Kaufman Rites Set Today

Services for Joseph C. Kaufman, 68, president of the Young Men's Shop, who died yesterday following a two-month illness, will be held at 1 p. m. today at the Gawler Funeral parlor, 1756 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Mr. Kaufman was a Mason and a member of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Dr. Abram Simon, of the congregation, will officiate at the ceremonies. Burial will be in the congregation cemetery.

Mr. Kaufman is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sybil Kaufman; his mother, Mrs. Charles Kaufman; four daughters, Mrs. Gale Owens, Sybil, Josephine and Hope Kaufman; two brothers, Edgar C. and Sydney E. Kaufman, with whom he was associated in business, and three sisters, Mrs. Abe Liebman, Mrs. Louis Koenigsberg, both of Washington, and Mrs. Ben Frank, of Baltimore.

Mullen, Lawyer, Obtains Appeal of Suspension

The way was open last night for Attorney John P. Mullen to carry to the Court of Appeals his fight against a suspension action entered by Police Judge John P. McMahon. Mullen's counsel succeeded in having overruled a motion to strike a bill of exception filed with the higher court in behalf of Mullen. Judge McMahon's order will be held in abeyance pending action of the Appeals Court.

Senate Adopts Joint Report on District Budget

Speedy Action Taken After Conferees Settle Dispute Over Doctors, Nurses; Relief Inquiry Unmentioned; Delay Faced in House.

The Senate yesterday adopted quickly the conference report on the District supply bill without any yestions being raised regarding the relief inquiry.

Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, asked Chairman Thomas whether the conferees had considered all the evidence in the dispute over whether additional resident physicians or nurses should be added to the staff at Gallinger Hospital.

"There was no disagreement after the situation was explained fully," Thomas said.

House managers had insisted in conference that they had provided sufficient additional nurses for the hospital. The Senate had substituted an appropriation of $25,000 for nurses for authorization to employ the physicians.

The District Medical Society sponsored the amendment and sent letters to all conferees urging that it be retained.

Austin made no attempt to challenge Senate approval of the conference report after making the inquiry.

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee, said that the conference report may not be called up in the House before next week because of the parliamentary situation. The House is now engaged in considering the naval expansion bill, and the interior supply bill conference report has preference over the District bill.

More than a dozen Senate amendments accepted by the House conferees, including the authorization for a trial of parking meters, have to be voted on separately in the House.

Hundreds of persons in the District, of whom 773 were able and anxious to work, were refused city aid during February due to inadequate funds, according to a report submitted yesterday to the Welfare Board by Miss M. Alice Hill, director of the Public Assistance Division.

The report, full of stories of the need and desperation of these persons "who do not know which way to turn," comes at a time when, barring any upheaval in the House and Senate, the $900,000 appropriation for relief in the District will not be increased.

Many families report that they have had no heat this winter and that the children cannot go to school because they have no clothing. One family has no blankets or bed covering.

Blind, She Tells Jury How Auto Killed Husband

Mrs. Edward J. King, 55-year-old blind woman, was carried before a District grand jury on a stretcher yesterday to tell what she knew of the hit-run accident in which her husband was killed and she was injured seriously.

Mrs. King has been in Sibley Hospital since December 12, the night that her husband, 75, and partially deaf, died as he attempted to push her from the path of a car at Tenth and Monroe streets northeast.

The man said to have been driving the car failed to stop at the scene but gave himself up to the police afterward. The grand jury will file a report on the case next week.

Electrocution Set Today for Slayer Of Mrs. Goodwin

Norman Wesley Robinson, whose fingernail scrapings condemned him as a murderer, will be electrocuted in the District Jail today for the killing of Mrs. Florence Goodwin, Government typist and manager of a fashionable boarding house.

The 28-year-old colored man will die between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. today. A former janitor at the house where Mrs. Goodwin was killed, he confessed to the murder after a microscopic examination had shown that bits of the woman's clothing were caught under his fingernails.

What to Do With Stale Bread Solved By Post Recipe Contest Participants

By Jean Green.

THAT baffling food mystery, "What can be done with stale bread?" was solved by Post readers in the recent recipe contest. A cross-section of recipes submitted includes stale bread batter bread, orange crumb macaroons, rhubarb betty, better crumb pancakes, molasses crumb pie, macaroni loaf, bread dumplings, Frontier shepherd's pie, Danish apple cake and croquettes.

Mrs. Mary Shannahan toasts the bread that accumulates and uses it to improve the flavor of dressings used for fish, roasts and croquettes. Mrs. Bertha Butchard, 415 East Leland street, Chevy Chase, Md., browns ¼ cup of fine bread crumbs in 1 tablespoon of butter and sprinkles it lightly over creamed cauliflower to give a dainty finishing touch.

Mrs. E. E. Conn, 2007 I street northwest, cuts stale bread in slices 2 inches thick and cuts out center to use as patty shells for mushrooms, oysters and creamed seasoned meats.

Mrs. Robert Burns, 432 Ingraham street, has a special jar on the pantry shelf for the pulverized crumbs made by grinding stale bread in the food grinder with a fine blade. She stuffs beets with a combination of cheese, minced onion, soft bread crumbs, butter and seasonings and uses the pulverized crumbs generously as a garnish before baking.

The winners in the contest had several unusual ideas for using the crumbs. The first prize was awarded Mrs. Robert Pace, of Eastham, Va., for a lemon pie recipe that had a tempting crust of crumbs over the filling. The use of the meringue is optional.

LEMON CRUMB PIE.

1½ cup stale bread crumbs (fine and dry)
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup boiling water
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon cornstarch
2 eggs
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 lemon rind grated
¼ cup powdered sugar Pastry

Add butter and boiling water to crumbs. Mix sugar and cornstarch; add well-beaten egg yolks, lemon juice and rind. Combine the mixtures.

Line pie pan with pastry, fill with mixture and bake 20 minutes in hot oven, 450 degrees Fahrenheit, until filling is set and pastry is brown. Cover with meringue made from beaten egg whites and powdered sugar. Bake in slow oven, 450 degrees Fahrenheit, until brown.

FOR SUNDAY night supper, try bread crumb flannelettes. The recipe was submitted by Mrs. E. E. Bobo, 1127 Seventeenth street northwest.

BREAD CRUMB FLANELETTES.

2 eggs well beaten
2 cups of milk
1 tablespoon of sugar
¼ teaspoon of salt
¼ cup of melted butter
1½ cups of bread crumbs
4 teaspoons of baking powder

Stir together the first four ingredients. To this mixture add enough flour to make a thin batter. Beat until very smooth and add melted butter and beat again.

To this add the finely-grated bread crumbs and baking powder. Blend into the batter until smooth, bake on a hot cake griddle as you would pancakes, making them nearly as large as the griddle. Spread thinly. When nicely browned on both sides, remove to a hot platter, butter and spread with gooseberry jam. Fold over both sides and turn over. Sprinkle lightly with powdered sugar and serve as dessert.

THE FOLLOWING recipe places emphasis on flavor and uses cubes of stale bread to increase servings. Third prize to Mrs. J. Edwin Lawton, 3204 Seventeenth street, for an excellent Lenten dish.

DEVILED SALMON.

1 cup of milk
2 tablespoons of flour
1 teaspoon of salt
1 dash of pepper
2 teaspoons of Worcestershire sauce
4 dashes of tabasco
6 slices of stale bread, toasted and cut in ¼-inch cubes
1 can of salmon, the meat broken apart with a fork and the bones removed.

Heat the milk in a saucepan. Stir the flour to a smooth thin paste with the liquid from the salmon and add slowly to the hot milk, stirring and cooking until smooth, thick and creamy. Add the seasonings and mix well. Add the cubes of toast and the broken salmon and stir carefully to mix well, but avoid making a paste. The toast and salmon should retain their identity. Pile in greased casserole or ramekins, sprinkle with fine toasted crumbs and brown in the oven.

FOR THIS UNUSUAL old German recipe we award to Mrs. H. T. Dean, 224 North Jackson street, Arlington, Va., the fourth prize. The recipe appeals to those who like the not-too-rich variety of cookies.

BREAD CRUMB MACAROONS.

½ of a ¼-pound square of butter (or 2 oz.)
¼ pound sugar (brown)
¾ pound bread crumbs (dry and and rolled) and rolled)
½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 eggs
¼ teaspoon soda

Melt the butter, add sugar, crumbs, spice, eggs slightly beaten and soda. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto a greased and floured cookie sheet (or pan) and bake in a medium oven.

A FRUITED cocoanut flavor lifts this bread pudding into the list of party desserts. The recipe was submitted by Mrs. James R. Smith, 1300 Vermont avenue northwest.

ORANGE-COCOANUT BREAD PUDDING.

2 cups stale bread crumbs (grated or finely ground)
¾ cup sugar
4 egg yolks
4 cups scalded milk
4 tablespoons butter
Juice of 4 oranges
½ cup cocoanut

Add bread crumbs and butter to scalded milk and soak 15 minutes; then add egg yolks, beaten with sugar; add orange juice, rind and all but one tablespoon of the cocoanut. Pour into buttered pudding dish, place dish in shallow pan of water and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit, until firm. Cover with meringue sprinkled over with the remaining cocoanut. Brown in oven.

Original Molding Ideas for Foods Wanted in Contest

If you are at heart a creator and like to concoct all sorts of interesting foods, then you will certainly want to participate in this new contest. The theme is molding. How do you transform the more plastic foods into definite shapes? Do you have a ring mold that you use in preparing the jellied chicken salad for your bridge parties? Do you like it filled with a fluff of crisp watercress? Garnished with sliced olives?

Do you have definite color schemes that you use for holidays and for each season? Do you use bright vegetables and fruits as a part of the dish or add them just before serving as a garnish? Do you make steamed puddings in a special shape? Or served curried dishes in a ring or rice or creamed eggs with molded spinach? Do you mold gelatin dishes in layers?

If you can answer "yes," then you should enter your recipe to receive one of the cash prizes. Three dollars will be awarded the first prize, $2 the second and three additional prizes will be awarded. Any molded dish served either hot or cold is eligible.

To qualify, write out your recipe carefully, including name and address and complete directions for preparation. Mail to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before March 23.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Girl Tell Man She Loves, and Plans to Marry, About Youthful Affair With Boy Who Died?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Four years ago, when I was 17, I fell deeply in love with a boy of 21. He was the finest, most decent, most upright young man I have ever known, even though I have known many since that time and have come to understand that my feeling was "puppy love." After we had gone together for nearly a year—because I loved him and he loved me (he truly did), because we had many easy opportunities, because it was so hard to deny one I loved, and because he wanted me so much—I went against my better judgment and high moral upbringing and yielded to him one night.

• • • •

Thereafter, we had pre-marital relations occasionally over a period of about six months. Then he was suddenly and tragically killed. I was heartbroken and thought I would never recover; but time does heal and today the relationship has become a tender memory. I have never regretted it, because he was at all times so sweet and decent and clean-minded. There was nothing coarse or shameful about our relationship; we were so much in love——. Oh, I don't know how to explain it, but I just want you to understand how it was. He had never touched another girl (so he told me; and I believed him) and I had never been, nor have I been since that time, intimate with any other boy, or had any desire to be.

• • • •

But here is my problem: I am now in love with a very fine man eight years my senior who wants to marry me. He idealizes me and I would not hurt him for anything in the world. My family approve of him in every way and I know that I could find lasting happiness with him. Although we have never discussed it, I know that he thinks I have never been touched, and I have given him every reason to suppose I have not. If he knew of this past affair, it would hurt him a great deal and probably kill some spark of idealism he has for me. Selfishly, I cannot bear to have that happen, but also, neither do I wish to deceive him.

• • • •

He is modern enough to understand if I should tell him about the whole thing. He knows I was previously in love with a boy who was killed, but he does not know how serious it was. But, as I have said, he is such an idealist that I shrink from telling him. It would only hurt him if I did tell him, and it would not help me in any way, unless perhaps it relieved my conscience, but then I would be sick with the thought that perhaps it made more difference to him than he would admit.

• • • •

What is the right and fair thing to do, Miss Haworth? I want to do that, because I love this man. I know that I was terribly wrong in the past, and I suppose it is because the other boy is dead that I feel I gave him something he wanted a great deal and thereby made his last days happier. But now that I am going to marry I find myself regretting that I did not completely save myself for this man. Am I being old-fashioned? I do not have anyone to go to for advice, for there is no one in the world who knows the circumstances and no one I care to consult, except you. Please, please help me out or "cuss me out," whichever you think you should do! JANE.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR JANE: If you wish to be brave, generous and just in dealing with this man's idealistic love for you, make no attempt to share with him the memory of that bittersweet episode of your youth. It has no more reality, no more substance, no more significance now—either for you or for him—than a poignant dream would have. Unquestionably you would be spoiling, to no purpose whatsoever, something very delicate, precious and irretrievable in your relationship, in trying to explain to him what had happened, how it came to pass, and what it meant to you. Your impulse to confess is less prompted by ethical considerations, in the last analysis, than it is by a desire to merge wholly with the man; to have no secrets of any kind from him; to be one with him utterly, mentally and spiritually.

• • • •

While this merger is devoutly to be desired, it is not to be attained through disinterring the past. It can best—and, indeed, only—be achieved through assimilating into your own mind, heart and spirit all that was tender, good and aspiring in that groping, impetuous experience, so that it adds something of gentleness, tolerance and wisdom to your personality, and then dedicating that better and richer personality fully to your relationship with this man you wish to marry, and whom you know—as a result of that old experience—that you do love with mature feeling, and with all that is noble in your nature.

• • • •

And just as I see the wisdom of assimilating this experience into your own soul, and letting it bear what fruit for good the native excellence of self may produce, so also do I see the wisdom of having done with feelings of remorse concerning it. Remorse, the dictionary tells us, is a "tormenting distress excited by a sense of guilt." Your sense of guilt is, I believe, less spiritually than socially inspired. You are judging yourself, just now, through this man's eyes; not through the eyes of a merciful God, Whom we may safely suppose understands the constant war between the flesh and the spirit in human nature, and Whose forgiveness you have probably long since merited and won. I am sure any psychiatrist would tell you that assiduously cherished remorse over that adolescent, ill-fated intimacy is the only real obstacle that stands in the way of your finding complete happiness in marriage with the second man today. And I am sure that any man of God would assure you that this was a long-since-absolved episode which concerns your own conscience alone, and which you have no obligation of any sort to confess to another human being. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Boned Cuts Preferred.

There is an increasing tendency to demand rolled roasts and other boned meats at the meat market. This is undoubtedly due to the ease of carving boned cuts. Boned cuts have the added advantage of making such inexpensive cuts as the shoulder of veal or lamb or the ribs of over-lean beef into palatable roasts.

The recipe for scrombled eggs with broiled tomatoes was submitted in a recent recipe contest by Mrs. Lorena Gawler, 7912 Falkland drive, Silver Spring, Md.

SCRAMBLED EGGS WITH BROILED TOMATOES

Cut firm tomatoes in halves crosswise and slice a small piece from the bottom. Sprinkle the halves with salt, pepper, and brown sugar. Dip in fine bread crumbs, then in egg beaten slightly with 2 tablespoons of water and again in crumbs. Dot with butter and place on a greased pan in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, until nearly soft, then broil under a flame until brown. Keep hot.

SCRAMBLED EGGS

2 tablespoons of butter
1 teaspoon of chopped onion
6 eggs
6 tablespoons of cream or top milk
½ teaspoon of salt
⅛ teaspoon of paprika

Melt butter in a skillet over a slow fire. Add onion and cook one minute. Beat eggs, add milk and salt, and pour into the skillet. When beginning to thicken, break into shreds with a fork. Heap on a hot platter, sprinkle with paprika and a little finely chopped parsley. Surround with the broiled tomatoes.

For a Bridge Luncheon.

If it's a bridge luncheon or special occasion serve one vegetable plain with butter or Hollandaise sauce, one deep fat fried or in au gratin style, a third glazed or shrouded in a delicious cheese sauce. Include as part of the plate or as accompanying salad service a group of crescent slices of avocado with a sprinkling of lemon juice and salt and a tart French dressing served separately. The decorative effect of the green-edged crescent slices is excellent, as well as providing a satisfying food with which to supplement this light luncheon menu.

Right Color at Psychological Moment Aid to Romance, Says Grace Moore

Advises Studying Tastes of Man You Want to Impress.

Stretching and Listening Also Are Listed as Beauty Helps.

By Ida Jean Kain.

"There is spring in the air
But I'll tell you flat
Spring can't arrive
'Till I've bought a new hat!"

THAT IS the little verse that sprang into my mind as I walked into Grace Moore's apartment, which was the scene of preparations for a concert tour, and picked my way through more hats than I have ever seen outside a millinery shop.

"I take it you like hats," was my greeting.

"I love them," Miss Moore said, "and think there is nothing that picks up the spirits like a new hat. They are my pet extravagance—and yet I invariably wear the same old favorite."

Unusual Insight.

Doubtlessly a number of such mental cocktails contribute to the "champagne sparkle" that makes Grace Moore an outstanding screen personality. This fascinating star has an unusual insight into the things that make women beautiful—and the list ranges from the lift of a new spring bonnet to the art of being a good listener, and from daily relaxation to stretching exercise.

With Miss Moore color is a matter of mood, and I found her to be refreshingly romantic. You will be delighted with her style suggestions—all along the line of color and romance.

"When your romance is at a critical stage," she counsels, "wear a heavenly blue shade. When you want to be gay but noncommittal, wear white . . . there is something about its subtle purity! Of course, if you want to be sophisticated, black is the thing."

Vivacity Dominates.

It is her contention that you can size up your man and decide whether he wants you to be worldly wise in black, lovely in white, vivid in green or red, or romantic in blue—and then act accordingly.

The vivacity which, it seems to me, is the dominant quality in Grace Moore's beauty, is largely due to her limitless vitality. She has never jeopardized her health by going on any of the foolish diets which flourish in Hollywood. She believes in eating sensibly for weight control.

Her advice on the subject of diet is that you do not try to mix reducing and romance, and she warns that if you talk about dieting before a man he will immediately look to see what is wrong with you! And there, for all its humor, is an excellent bit of psychology.

Curves Are Ample.

Although this singer's curves are a trifle on the ample side they are, nevertheless, entirely harmonious, and she has a regally graceful posture. She believes that posture is highly important to beauty, and that it is impossible to imagine a beauty walking into a room all slumped over.

A beautiful posture is exercise in itself, but Miss Moore also favors stretching exercises and knuckle massage for a youthful throatline. She thinks most women fail to realize the importance of relaxation and is convinced that one hour a day of complete relaxation will increase mental and physical stability by at least 15 years.

You will like her philosophy about beauty: "Beauty of face is a great inheritance, but the least important of all a woman's qualities. The older you grow the more you have to rely on the inner beauty that is created as one goes along."

Specifies Listening.

"Can women think too much about beauty?" I asked.

"They can, and the woman who is obviously conscious of her beauty is the least attractive of all women. Being too conscious of any quality will spoil its charm. Many women who have no beauty at all have created halos of beauty about themselves. No charm surpasses the combination of a cultivated mind, a lovely speaking voice and kindly attitude. The really clever woman is a good listener, and never too preoccupied with herself."

THE IRRESISTIBLE Grace Moore gives you this diet tip: Don't talk about diet in front of a man—or he will look to see what is wrong with you.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

A Day of Her Own.

SOME TIME, somehow, she is going to have a whole day to herself. One in which she will not have to go to the office, nor yet wash out stockings, catch up a seam, get her wave set, look around for a serviceable little blouse or lay in a supply of notions and cosmetics.

Not a vacation day with its attendant packing and unpacking of suitcases, its catching of trains, its riding in buses, its mingling in beach crowds, its rush to see dentists and doctors, old friends and relations. Not a Sunday with its obligations, its distractions and its accumulated chores. Not a holiday with its excitement, its confusion, its pressing in of people and its great loneliness.

She is going to have a morning in which she will not be awakened by an alarm clock, a telephone, a peremptory voice or her own conscience. One in which she can stretch and relax with the soothing assurance that in the ensuing 24 hours she won't have to do anything whatever at a certain time — not even eat breakfast.

She will NOT do her exercises or take a shower. She will bathe slowly and languidly and she will dillydally about dressing—sit down and read the morning paper as long as she is interested, thrust it in the wastebasket if she isn't.

• • • •

SHE IS GOING to turn the clock to the wall, set the telephone receiver off its hook. All day long she is going to do things as the notion strikes her. She may wander along the streets aimlessly window shopping or saunter along the aisles in a department store like those sleek, placid-faced women who seem to have a hundred years at their disposal. Or she may sit in the park and idly watch the pigeons, the squirrels and the sparrows importantly going about their little concerns.

Or perhaps she will walk in the woods and sense its pungent fragrance and its great quietude. Or she may board a street car or bus bearing the happy-sounding name of some far-away place and ride wherever it takes her. Or she may read a bright covered popular magazine (eating chocolates all the while) or go to a movie or dine in some strange restaurant. Or perhaps she will lie on the grass and watch the clouds take strange shapes and let her mind wander, thinking of nothing and welcoming whatever vagrant ideas drift into her consciousness.

ALL DAY LONG she will loaf and dream, letting life idly flow through her, never permitting a thought of what time it is and how she can get this done by 11 and that by 12 and how by pushing a little faster she can clear her desk by 5 and get to bed by 10 and up by 6:30 and her work under way so she can keep that appointment the day after tomorrow.

Yes, sometime she is going to have such a day. A day on which she will not know that tensing of the muscles, that tightening of the lips, that racing of the heart. An unhurried halcyon day to put into her storehouse of memories. A day that will never be yesterday because it will be eternally her own.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 17.

IT ALWAYS IS interesting to look behind the great figures in the world of sport to catch a glimpse of the little woman who runs up their ham and eggs when they are fit and full of fight, and who doses them when they aren't feeling very well.

ALICE HUGHES

The latest of these women in the background to meet the repertorial eye is Mrs. Glenn Cunningham, spouse of that astonishing Kansan who has just run a mile faster than any human who ever lived. When Margaret Cunningham was a student at Kansas University she had some notion of becoming either a newspaperwoman or a teacher. Now this little brunette finds herself boss trainer of this fastest human and devoted mother of his 9-month-old daughter, Sara. And she takes mighty good care of Glenn.

The two were married after their graduation from rock-chalk, jay-hawk, Kansas University in 1934. And since he received his sheepskin, he never has stopped running, going from triumph to triumph. And Margaret always has been right there at home, seeing that her wonder-man gets plenty of his favorite food—thick porterhouse steaks, cooked medium. He says they give him his enormous energy.

Just now the little family is living up in our homey borough of the Bronx. The great runner has a modest job here, has been taking post-graduate work at New York University and has kept up his classic loping until he cracked the indoor record at the Dartmouth meet not long ago. But Mrs Cunningham concentrates on Glenn and their little girl—sees that he gets his steak and vegetables, and even keeps his big scrapbook posted. She's the devoted wife of a champion.

"I worry about Glenn," she says, "for fear he'll fall or be spiked in these indoor races. I'll be happy when he hangs up his spikes for good." When he does, it will be as a champ—with a nice champion wife and comrade, too!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: "A determined promotion drive on this five-suit bridge thing is in progress here. Elsa Maxwell's name already has been lent to it, and now I hear that Ely Culbertson is going to expound its problem to a select group at the Lombardy Hotel. It is all a little trying to a girl who was brought up on 500 and had a hard enough struggle with "auction"—let alone this new-fangled "contract." Well, we can't have everything. In fact, most of us can have very little, if it comes right down to that.

Incidentally, these new decks have just gone on sale here in a big way, and I don't mind saying the tap is pretty high. But in our stores an instructor will be on hand to teach customers the use of the new "Royal" suit.

Gladys Robinson, wife of Edward G., the screen star, has taken a crack at the writing business. In her recent visit she told me she was pinch-hitting a Hollywood column for that charming and able veteran of the picture colony, Rob Wagner. Wonder if she finds it easier than acting, or being wife to a famous man who is still "Little Caesar" to the thousands of small lads who chase him for autographs?

CAPITAL MANNERS

Personal Inventory on Courtesy Will Pay Dividends.

By Margaret Wallace

A GROUP of young matrons had a merry time one afternoon recently checking up on each other and themselves in their rating in the realm of good manners and good form.

At least one enterprising matron made a list of questions to which the answers should be "yes" and another one to which the answers should be "no" and requested the rest of the group to mark themselves honestly.

Among the "yes" questions were: "Do you listen politely when another person is talking?" "Do you retire to the privacy of dressing room or bedroom to comb your hair even if it is short and curled and you have a convenient comb in your purse?" "Do you refrain from eating your soup to the last drop and from tipping up the plate?" "Do you always introduce men to women instead of women to men?"

Tried If on Males.

Among the "questions to which the answers should be "no" were: "Do you powder your nose and use lip stick in public." "Do you cool your food by blowing on it?" "Do you throw olive pits on the floor or put them on the table cloth instead of placing them on the side of the plate?" "Do you arrange your clothing in public?" "Do you discuss your food dislikes at the table?" "Do you attempt to help the waitress or butler at a formal dinner by handing them your plate or taking a glass or plate from them instead of allowing them to remove them or to place them on the table before you?"

So pleased were the young matrons with their "game" that they compiled a list of questions to take home to their husbands.

This check-up in manners for husbands included "Do you neglect to assist the women to be seated at the table at home or in a cafe?" "Have you the habit of pushing your plate away from you and tilting back on your chair when you have finished dinner?" "Do you get in your car first and permit your wife or any other woman to get in any way she can?"

Superiority, Worst Fault.

There were any number of other everyday questions in manners on this list of questions and the young matrons resolved that they would keep a careful check on themselves so that they would not be guilty of these faults which crop up in any household or group.

They decided that the average well-bred person is much more careful of manners in public or with strangers than with families and intimate friends. They all agreed that true good breeding means to avoid the little slips of manners or neglects of common courtesy in the most intimate or family circles.

Mrs. Denman Uses Her Time To Live Fullest Possible Life

MRS. DAVID N. DENMAN.

Is Clubwoman, Lawyer, Politician and Mother All at Once.

By Genevieve Reynolds.

MANY WOMEN combine business activity with home making, but Mrs. David N. Denman, of Latrobe, Pa., who comes to Washington frequently on legislative missions, carries on a four-fold career.

Mrs. Denman is legislative chairman for The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club. The mother of two sons, age 2 and 7, this energetic woman finds time to practice law, participate in State and National politics, direct club activities and run a home. Since 1924 she has been a member of her husband's law firm and also has served as Representative in the Pennsylvania State Legislature from Westmoreland County.

In order to carry on efficiently in the club, professional and political world, as well as in the home sphere, it is necessary to sacrifice somewhere, points out Mrs. Denman. Accordingly she has given up an active social life.

Gives Up Social Life.

She says, "I find that I do not have time to keep in close personal contact with friends. I don't have time for the parties, dances and other social functions that play such a large part in my home town. Therefore, I miss the intimate association of women and their cheery social life."

When queried as to how she managed to do so many things well, she replied: "It's a matter of budgeting time, conserving energy and having a husband who is interested in my work?

"Every minute must count. Therefore, all activities must be planned systematically, and not left to chance. In my own case, I get up early enough to see the elder son off to school. I go to the office at 9 o'clock and return at lunch time to dine with the family. Usually, I can be at home by 5 o'clock, but if I am delayed over time I feel that my children need this time to play with other children more than any personal attention I could give them. For I feel that it is important that they learn to get along with other people. Each night I bathe and put the children to bed so as to preserve a personal touch. Then I read to them or play with them until 8 o'clock."

Doesn't "Baby" Children.

Mothers, believes Mrs. Denman, can do more for their children by giving them a broad, tolerant outlook on life, rich contacts and professional understanding than running to pick them up each time they fall down, answer each of their childish whims or wash their sticky hands all day.

"As for conserving energy," she explained, "that is the first thing any woman must learn to do, if she expects to engage in more than one activity. This can be done if she will not waste her time in idle, nervous fretting and anxious conjecturing. Then too, she must learn to renew whenever possible so as to renew the strength that is all ready exhausted."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

New Plastic Surgery.

Four men who believed they could judge character by facial appearance were gathered in the office of a plastic surgeon—a playwright, a musician, a lawyer and a doctor. The surgeon brought in to them the plaster life masks of some patients, which had been made before operation.

"What is this one?" he asked.

'A man with a receding chin like that must be a weakling and a failure," said the playwright.

"Wrong," said the plastic surgeon. "He is an aggressive industrialist."

The next mask is put up. It is the lawyer's turn.

'A gangster. The gash in his chin was received in a fight."

"Wrong again," said the plastic surgeon. "It is a minister whose face was cut in an automobile accident."

"This one," said the doctor, "with the broken nose and the mashed-up ear is evidently a pugilist."

"On the contrary, he is a school teacher with a very sensitive disposition. He received his injuries through a fall in childhood."

Examining the casts of the same people after plastic surgery had done its work, the same jury acknowledged that they would have come to different conclusions.

The plastic surgeon of today is able not only to correct deformities, but also to mold faces according to his idea of the spiritual needs of the owner.

The work of a plastic surgeon has been well described for the laity in a book called "New Faces, New Futures—Rebuilding Character With Plastic Surgery," by Maxwell Maltz.

Baltimore Ice Carnival Draws Washingtonians

Many Will Motor to Nearby City to Watch Skaters and Attend Dance at Elkridge Kennels Tomorrow Night.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

While Washington settles into its traditional Lenten lull, with nothing more exciting than an occasional musicale to brighten the social scene, all sorts of interesting out-of-town events continue to attract residents.

Tonight and tomorrow night a number of Washingtonians will motor to Baltimore to attend the Ice Carnival. Frederic Lee and R. E. Lee Taylor, co-chairmen of the affair, are widely known in Washington. Mr. Taylor and his attractive wife visit here frequently as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Following the final performance tomorrow night there will be a supper dance at the exclusive Elkridge Kennels for performers and sponsors of the carnival. Incidentally, the skating stars who will appear in the carnival both nights, would add luster to any scene. Among them will be Joan Tozzer, daughter of a Harvard professor and this year's American woman's champion, and Eleanor O'Meara, Canadian champion. Also among the participants will be two Washington residents, Mrs. Arthur H. Clephane and Miss Dorothy Snell, who will appear in "The Valkyrie" number.

Mrs. Clephane, the former Miss Isabelle Markell, of New York and Baltimore, performed at the ice carnival two years ago. Last winter, she received favorable attention when she appeared as a member of an ice-skating team in New York. Miss Snell, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Snell, who recently moved to Washington from St. Paul, Minn., has won wide acclaim as a skater, having been junior runner-up for honors in the national championships.

Among Washington residents who will go to Baltimore for the carnival are Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, jr., Mr. and Mrs. William B. Kerkham, jr., and Henry Stansbury.

Flower Show in New York Is of Wide Interest Here

From New York comes word that the International Flower Show held this week at the Grand Central Palace has drawn a number of Washingtonians. Four spacious floors have been given over to the show, each one literally bursting into bloom for the occasion.

From all accounts, two all-white gardens have run away with the spotlight. One presents a lavish outlay of birch, lilacs, tulips, dogwood and pansies, the other has been planted in petunias, larkspur and peonies. The rock gardens, set off with miniature cataracts, and the "early summer gardens" also have come in for plenty of attention.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Dunthorne and Mr. and Mrs. Mary Grant Rafter have visited the show several times in the past few days. Mr. Dunthorne has a display of prints in connection with it. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, who returned Wednesday night after a brief visit in New York, where they stayed at the Waldorf-Astoria, managed to "do" the entire 4-floor display in one day, and "enjoyed every minute of it, despite the huge crowd."

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Off to Florida Today

Incidentally, Mrs. Erwin, who recently returned from a two-weeks' sojourn in Hot Springs, will be off a-vacationing again today. She and her husband and their children will leave for Palm Beach, Fla., where they will visit Mrs. Erwin's mother, Mrs. Delos Blodgett, at her winter home there. Accompanying them to Florida will be Mrs. Erwin's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Gaillard, and their children, who will also be Mrs. Blodgett's guests for several days.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

MRS. GEORGE HOWE has now joined the ranks of New York's "working golls," commuting to Washington for week-ends. Mr. Howe is an architect and they live in Georgetown in just the kind of a house one would expect an architect to choose. When not bent over a blueprint, Mr. Howe writes fiction. He is now at work on his second novel. He has spent years digging archaeological relics in Egypt and running, unsuccessfully, for the Legislature of his native Rhode Island.

DUDLEY HARMON

Mrs. Howe is a sister of Chauncey and E. Cortlandt Parker.

MRS. GEORGE T. PETTINGILL, wife of the commandant of the Navy Yard, has cards out for a tea a week from Monday in honor of Vice Admiral and Mrs. Meyrick and the captain and officers of the H. M. S. York . . . Wonder if Mrs. Pettingill addresses her invitations herself? If so, she has one of the most distinguished handwritings in Washington . . . Others whose penmanship is veddy, veddy smart are Miss Rebecca Wellington and Miss Marion Trumbull. They certainly get plenty of practice in addressing envelopes by the hundreds in their capacities as leading social secretaries.

THE MOST EXCTING PART of the John Caswells' European trip came a day out of New York on the way home, when the Ile de France ran into a hurricane, making it a day late. Among their fellow passengers were the uncle of the King of Egypt; Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt and Jean Muir, the actress. The gale caused a giant wave, which, whipped up by winds, rose 80 feet and smashed 20 huge windows on the promenade deck of the liner . . . Another calamity note: Anthony Rumbold, of the British Embassy, was in a slight automobile accident, but is recovering.

IT'S GLAMOUR all the way for Sally Holmes and Mary Cootes, now in Egypt as translators for the State Department. Letters from the two say the biggest event so far has been a reception at the King's palace in Cairo. Unfortunately the Queen, who has been hailed by the newspaper caption writers as the modern Cleopatra, did not appear.

Everybody sat at a huge table loaded with unusual foods and wines, and were served by picturesque flunkeys. Our correspondents say it was just like the Arabian Nights. The presence of members of the Diplomatic Corps, glittering like Christmas trees with decorations, and of members of the British Air Force, with the Scotchmen in kilts, added to the scene. As a special treat the King staged a performance of Corneille's "Le Cid," which was right up the alley of our two translators, whose specialty is French.

• • • •

THE PRESENCE of numerous "digs" also makes for gayety. This is the Cairo slang for archeologists, with whom the place abounds. With some of these as escorts, Miss Holmes and Miss Cootes made a holiday trip in small sailboats up the Nile to Assuan and Luxor.

When the conference terminates the end of this month, Miss Holmes will set off for Washington while Miss Cootes joins up with Gracyn Wheeler for a tennis tour. They will play in Greece, Rome, Vienna, Budapest, Prague and Berlin, reaching Paris in time for the June matches at the Stade Roland Garros. Wimbledon will provide a fitting climax to all this excitement.

Incidentally Mrs. Harry N. Cootes, mother of Miss Cootes, is working hard these days for the success of the Alexandria Narcissus show April 20 and 21. Her small garden, with its flower beds, little fountain and well-kept grass plots, is one of the loveliest.

Social lionizers have been crushed over refusal of Ethel Barrymore and her daughter, Ethel Colt, to attend parties during their week here. Mr. Martin, who did such a good portrait of the actress Bette Davis that he is to oversee hanging of it in Radio City, left late last night for New York for the ceremonies.

As a very busy young man he thinks nothing of turning out pictures of Hamlin Garland, the writer; of Gen. Sydney Sanner, former judge advocate general of the United States Army . . . in addition to carrying on a spirited campaign for an art museum and opera house in Los Angeles.

Auxiliaries of Legion, Spanish War Give Fetes

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Both the American Legion Auxiliary and the Auxiliary of the United Spanish War Veterans last night entertained at large parties. The former gave its annual birthday dance and the latter a dinner dance honoring its national president, Mrs. Mary McGauley, who was here in her first visit to the Department of the District of Columbia.

The dinner in honor of Mrs. McGauley was held at the Roosevelt Hotel with the national commander of the veterans' organization, Alfred J. Kennedy, also a guest of honor. Mrs. Myrtle Moxley, department president, presided, and Victor L. Woodridge, department commander, and officers of his staff were present.

Following the dinner, Mrs. McGauley made a short talk regarding the program of the national auxiliary, which maintains its headquarters in Washington. She emphasized the importance of hospitalization and child welfare work and urged the District units to support the membership drive which is now being launched. There are 1,200 auxiliaries in all parts of the United States, she said.

Following the dinner, motion pictures in color were shown of the services held in Arlington Cemetery February 15, commemorating the sinking of the Maine.

Nearly 200 members of the auxiliary and the veterans camps attended the dinner. At the head table with the guests of honor and department president and commander were the quartermaster general, Patrick Callan; national secretary, Mrs. Louise Williams; national treasurer, Mrs. Virginia Murray; the past department president, Mrs. Margaret Burns, who was chairman of the dinner arrangements; assistant quartermaster general, Harry Coulter, and the president of the Daughters of '98, Helen Musselman.

The Fort Myer Orchestra played for dancing later in the evening.

Legion Auxiliary Has Colorful Dance

The Legion Auxiliary held its birthday ball for the District Department at the Carlton Hotel. Receiving with the president of the auxiliary, Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frank T. Hines and the department commander, Thomas Mason and Mrs. Mason.

Mrs. Harper's gown was of mulberry lace and with it she wore a green sequin jacket in keeping with St. Patrick's Day. All of the decorations were carried out in green and white and a group of young girls moved among the guests vending shamrocks during the evening.

At 11 o'clock Capt. Guy C. Nadeau, of the American Legion guard of honor, led the annual birthday prom. The parade was in three divisions. The first group was composed of department officers of the Legion and auxiliary, headed by the department colors of both organizations. Those for the auxiliary were carried by the official color bearers, Mrs. Helen Ware and Mrs. Isabel Steinbraker.

Next came the 20 legionnaires of the D. C. department who are serving on national committees this year, the District chairmen of both the Legion and auxiliary and past department commanders and presidents.

The Forty and Eight, in their French gray smocks, and the women of the Eight and Forty in their white silk dresses and red capes and hats, comprised the third groups, which officially escorted Chef de Chemin de Fer Fred Fraser, national head of the men's organization who was a guest of honor. Members of the first two groups formed a line on either side of the ballroom as the uniformed division marched through, followed by a huge birthday cake which was wheeled in.

On the three-tiered cake were 19 green candles, for the Legion's 19 years, and, in the center, a larger one "to grow on." Mrs. John McCabe, chapeau of the Eight and Forty, handed to her husband, chef de gare of the Forty and Eight, matches with which to light the candles. Mr. Mason as Legion department commander, blew them out and gave a short toast.

First-Hand Picture of Conflict In Spain Given by Volunteer Here

Dr. Gustav Regler, Wounded in War, Is Guest of Honor at Reception Held by Women of Friends of Spanish Democracy.

A vivid first-hand picture of what is occurring in Spain today was presented by Dr. Gustav Regler at a reception given in his honor last night by the Women's Committee of the Friends of Spanish Democracy. The affair was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hawes, and among the guests were the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de los Rios.

At the close of the reception a cablegram was sent to Premier Negrin pledging the support of the Spanish government's effort to have this country life the arms embargo against it. The message read:

"Washington friends of Spanish democracy, gathered tonight to greet your friend Gustav Regler, desire to express deep emotion, and admiration herioc fight of Spanish people against common enemy all democratic peoples. Pledge every possible aid and will not rest until American arms embargo against you lifted."

Ernest Hemingway, the author, whose guest Dr. Regler has been in Key West, Fla., wrote the introduction of Dr. Regler, which was read last night by Marquis Childs before he spoke.

"Gustav Regler has no right to be here; he should be in a cemetery in the outskirts of Valencia, beside Gen. Lucacz and Werner Heilburn, two heroes of the International Brigades, killed in the same offensive against Husca," said Mr. Hemingway's tribute to the loyalist hero.

He continued with an explanation of how Dr. Regler had been with him at Key West while convalescing from a wound received from the same explosive which killed his general. A pound and a half of iron went through his back and his recovery was considered little short of a miracle. He also was among the heroes at Boadilla, del Monte, Arganda bridge and the Prado, Mr. Hemingway said.

Dr. Regler, who became a pacifist after the World War, was exiled from Germany in 1934 by Hitler for his attempt to preserve the status quo of the Saar Basin. He went to Spain and joined the Loyalist forces with the rank of commissar in one of the international brigades of the Twelfth Division.

He wore his Spanish uniform with a little medal on one pocket bearing the inscription "International Volunteers of Liberty."

The commissar's duty is to keep up the morale of the troops and contact the civilian population, said Dr. Regler. He told of saving from destruction priceless Goya paintings and of transporting to safety women and children from villages in a section where air raids were being staged. The commissars also have done much to halt the cruelties rife on both sides during the early part of the conflict, he said. The Loyalists are now trying to impress upon the troops that the rebels are Spaniards, even though for the present they are enemies.

The commissars also direct the educational projects undertaken among the soldiers in an effort to carry on the war against illiteracy whenever there is a lull on any sector.

Just before leaving, Dr. Regler said, he met President Azana in a morgue viewing women and children victims of an air raid the night before. On his arrival in this country, he saw a motion picture of President Roosevelt, thanking the American people for their aid in the fight on infantile paralysis. Drawing the contrast between the two scenes, he expressed the hope that through the women's committee, there might be a "march of dimes" for the aid of Spanish children who are war victims, like that which President Roosevelt's appeal won for the children of America.

Among last night's guests were Miss Josephine Herb, Mr. and Mrs. John Carmody, Mrs. Gardner Jackson, Mrs. Paul Willert, whose husband is head of the Oxford University Press in New York; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fischer, Senator and Mrs. James P. Pope, Miss Irene Wilson, of Ayrshire, Scotland, a sister of Mrs. Fischer; Francis Gorman, Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Mr. and Mrs. David Barr, Mrs. Jennie Ballou, Dr. and Mrs. Gregory Silvermaster, Mrs. Joseph McKenzie, and Mr. and Mrs. Joel Berrell.

Camps Planned For Girl Scouts

Day Recreation Centers Are to Be Opened in D. C. on June 29.

June 29 was set yesterday as the date for the opening of the Girl Scout Day Camps in Washington. This year the camps will be conducted two days a week for a six-week period, instead of one for eight weeks, as last season.

The Day Camp committee, of which Mrs. W. M. Kiplinger is chairman, sponsors five camps under the jurisdiction of the local Girl Scout Council. They are located at Greenleaf Point, First and V streets southwest; the Jessup Blair Co[illegible]nity Hou[illegible] Kemble Park, Wesley Heights; Langdon Park, and on a private site, the Lane property in Arlington County.

Miss Katherine Carter, a member of the staff of the Girl Scouts of the District, is day camp adviser. Other committee members who attended the meeting yesterday were Mrs. James Donaldson, District 1; Mrs. Edward Webster and Mrs. W. C. Dowden, District 2; Mrs. R. H. Doherty, District 3; Mrs. Claude Jones, District 5, and Mrs. John Comer, District 6.

Aside from the fact that the girls return to their homes at night, the activities in the day camps are the same as those of an established camp, and the cost to each girl is only that of carfare and lunch.

First class Girl Scouts will be entertained by the program committee of the council at a luncheon tomorrow at the Palisades Field House. Mrs. Maury Middleton, chairman of the committee, has issued invitations to approximately 75 girls who have attained first-class rank and are between the ages of 14 and 18.

This week-end finds four Girl Scout troops and their leaders strapping their packs and away for a hike.

Rockwood, in Bethesda, Md., which is not only the newest camping site for Washington scouts, but a national camp, will be visited by scouts of Troop 50 with Mrs. Robert Laughlin leader, who plan a trip this afternoon and to stay till Sunday, and Troops 24 and 106 who plan day hikes tomorrow afternoon. Leaders of these troops are Miss Olive O'Hern and Mrs. J. T. Onley.

Troop 1, under the leadership of Mrs. R. H. Rule is also planning a day hike Saturday to Kiplinger Cabin, in Loudoun County, Va. Kiplinger Cabin has been a favorite with Washington Girl Scouts since last spring when it was opened for their use through the kindness of Mrs. Kiplinger.

Text of Secretary Hull's Admonition to Nation to Increase Its Armaments

Right vs. Brute Force Called Crucial Issue

International Anarchy Threatens to Inundate World, Sweep Away Bases of Civilization, Press Club Is Warned.

Complete text of the address delivered yesterday by Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, at the National Press Club, follows:

In the course of the daily press conferences at the Department of State, I have occasion to see many of you and to touch upon day-to-day developments in our foreign relations. Such information as I am able to give you in these conferences must, of necessity, relate to specific questions, and, oftentimes, to isolated events. Yet upon you, representatives of the press, rests a heavy responsibility in keeping our people currently and accurately informed on the vital issues which arise in our country's relations with other nations. I welcome, therefore, this opportunity to meet with the members of the National Press Club in the calmer atmosphere of an occasion like the present one, and to discuss with you some of the fundamental conditions and problems presented by our international relations and our foreign policy.

The primary objectives of our foreign policy are the maintenance of the peace of our country and the promotion of the economic, the social, and the moral welfare of our people. Unfortunately, the means of attaining these objectives involve today so many factors of great complexity that their real significance is frequently misunderstood and misinterpreted.

By instinct and tradition, our country has been, throughout its history, sincerely devoted to the cause of peace. Within the limitations imposed by time and circumstance, we have earnestly sought to discharge our responsibilities as a member of the family of nations in promoting conditions essential to the maintenance of peace. We have consistently believed in the sanctity of treaty obligations and have endeavored to apply this belief in the actual practice of our foreign relations. In common with all other nations we have, since the end of the World War, assumed a solemn obligation not to resort to force as an instrument of national policy. All this gives us a moral right to express our deep concern over the rising tide of lawlessness, the growing disregard of treaties, the increasing reversion to the use of force, and the numerous other ominous tendencies which are emerging in the sphere of international relations.

Public Statement Issued Last July.

On July 16, 1937, I issued a public statement, setting forth the fundamental principles to which our Government adheres in the formulation of its foreign policy. On behalf of our Government, I transmitted a copy of this statement to every government of the world, requesting such comment as each might see fit to offer. To our profound gratification, an overwhelming majority of those governments joined in affirming their faith in these vital principles.

The most important of these principles, which are indispensable to a satisfactory international order, are as follows:

Maintenance of peace should be constantly advocated and practiced.

All nations should, through voluntary self-restraint, abstain from use of force in pursuit of policy and from interference in the internal affairs of other nations.

All nations should seek to adjust problems arising in their international relations by processes of peaceful negotiation and agreement.

Modification of provisions of treaties, when need therefor arises, should be by orderly processes carried out in a spirit of mutual helpfulness and accommodation.

Nations Must Respect Rights of Others.

Each nation should respect the rights of others and perform scrupulously its own established obligations; in brief, international law and the spirit which underlies it must be revitalized and strengthened.

Steps should be taken toward promotion of economic security and stability the world over through lowering or removal of barriers to international trade, according to effective equality of commercial opportunity, and application of the principle of equality of commercial treatment.

National armaments should be limited and be progressively reduced; at the same time, realizing the necessity for maintaining armed forces adequate for national security, each nation should to that end be prepared to reduce or increase its own armed forces in proportion as reductions or increases are made by other nations.

Apart from the question of alliances with others, each nation should be prepared to engage in co-operative effort, by peaceful and practicable means, in support of these principles.

The peace and progress of every nation are just as dependent on international law and order, based upon the foregoing principles, as the welfare, stability, and progress of a community are dependent upon domestic law and order, based upon legal, moral, and other recognized standards of conduct. No government faithful to the sacred trust involved in the task of providing for the safety and well-being of its people can disregard these universal principles. Every nation, whatever its form of government, can support them. Every nation must support them, if civilization is to survive. The longer the nations delay acceptance and observance of these fundamental tenets of constructive statemanship, the graver will be the jeopardy into which all worthwhile international relationships will be plunged, and with them the welfare, the happiness, and the civilized existence of all nations.

The crucial issue today is whether these principles will be vitalized and be firmly established as the foundation of an international order, or whether international anarchy based on brute force will inundate the world and ultimately sweep away the very bases of civilization and progress. That issue is universal. No more than a community or a nation can the world base its existence in part on law and in part on lawlessness, in part on order and in part on chaos, in part in processes of peace and in part on methods of violence.

On August 23, I made another public statement, reaffirming the principles which should underlie international order, peace, and justice, if the world is to avoid a relapse into another dark night of international anarchy and general retrogression. I called attention again to the fact that if these principles are to be effective they must be universal in their application. This statement was prompted by the fact that the progress and possibilities of armed conflict were becoming more alarming both in the European and the Far Eastern areas, and that the basic principles to which I have just referred were being challenged and the doctrine of armed force was gaining supremacy in important regions of the world.

During the early months of the conflict in the Far East I appealed on several occasions, in the name of our Government, to both Japan and China to desist from using armed force and to resort to the well-recognized processes of peaceful settlement for the adjustment of whatever differences existed between them. I said that we would be glad to be of assistance toward facilitating, in any manner that might be practicable and mutually agreeable, resort by them to such processes.

Protection Afforded Nationals Abroad.

On August 17, and with frequent reiteration thereafter, I stated that we did not intend to abandon our nationals and our interests in China.

From time immemorial, it has been the practice of civilized nations to afford protection, by appropriate means and under the rule of reason, to their nationals and their rights and interests abroad. This policy has been pursued by the Government of the United States throughout the existence of our country.

Methods and means of affording protection abroad vary according to the places in which and the circumstances under which protection is called for. In the case of China, where unusual local conditions were such that the protection afforded by local authorities did not suffice to give security against excited and lawless elements, there have occasionally been sent—not by this country alone but by a number of countries—armed forces, to contribute to the affording of such protection as is due under the rules of international law and the provisions of treaties. American forces thus sent to China have at no time had any mission of aggression, and it has been the practice of the American Government to withdraw such forces whenever and as soon as the local situation so develops as to warrant the view that their withdrawal can be effected without detriment to American interests and obligations in general.

In announcing our intention to afford appropriate and reasonable protection to our rights and interests in the Far East, I stated clearly that we are fully determined to avoid the extremes either of internationalism or of isolationism. Internationalism would mean undesirable political involvements; isolationism would either compel us to confine all activities of our people within our own frontiers, with incalculable injury to the standard of living and the general welfare of our people, or else expose our nationals and our legitimate interests abroad to injustice or outrage wherever lawless conditions arise. Steering a sound middle course between these two extremes, we are convinced that a policy of affording appropriate protection—under the rule of reason, in such form as may be best suited to the particular circumstances, and in accordance with the principles we advocate—is imperatively needed to serve our national interest.

Decisions Are Based On Broader Outlook.

Our decision in this matter is based not only on what we firmly believe to be a specific and elementary duty of a government toward its citizens, but also on other and broader considerations. Respect by a country for the rights and interests of others is a visible test for the fulfillment of obligations assumed by virtue of acceptance of international law and of undertakings embodied in negotiated international instruments. It is, therefore, a test of the observance of those fundamental principles of civilized relations among nations, which, if firmly established, provide in themselves the best means of protection against violation and abuse of the legitimate rights and interests of every nation.

To waive rights and to permit interests to lapse in the face of their actual or threatened violation—and thereby to abandon obligations—in any important area of the world, can serve only to encourage disregard of law and of the basic principles of international order, and thus contribute to the inevitable spread of international anarchy throughout the world. For this country, as for any country, to act in such manner anywhere would be to invite disregard and violation of its rights and interests everywhere, by every nation so inclined, large or small.

To respect the rights of others and to insist that others respect our rights has been the traditional policy of our country. This policy was admirably expressed by James Monroe when, in his message to Congress on December 2, 1823, he said:

"Our policy . . . remains the same: . . . to cultivate friendly relations . . . and to preserve those relations by frank, firm, and manly policy, meeting in all instances the just claims of every power, submitting to injuries from none."

Rule of Law Not Yet Supplanted by Force.

In a world in which the rule of force has not as yet been firmly and surely supplanted by the rule of law, it is the manifest duty of a great nation to maintain armed forces adequate for its national defense. Writing on this subject, which was as vital to our national life 150 years ago as it is today, James Madison said:

"The means of security can only be regulated by the means and the danger of attack. They will, in fact, be ever determined by these rules, and by no others."

It is the duty of the Federal Government to insure the safety of our country and to determine what "means of security" are, at any given moment, needed to provide against "the means and the danger of attack." The responsible heads of our naval establishment offer convincing reasons in support of the program, now before the Congress, to render adequate the means of our national defense. No policy would prove more disastrous than for an important nation to fail to arm adequately when international lawlessness is on the rampage. It is my considered judgment that, in the present state of world affairs, to do less than is now proposed would lay our country open to unpredictable hazards. It would, moreover, seriously restrict our Nation's ability to command, without purpose or occasion for resorting to arms, proper respect for its legitimate rights and interests, the surrender of which would constitute abandonment of the fundamental principles of justice and morality and peace among nations.

The maintenance of these principles that are of concern to all nations alike cannot and should not be undertaken by any one nation alone. Prudence and common sense dictate that, where this and other nations have common interests and common objectives, we should not hesitate to exchange information and to confer with the governments of such other nations and, in dealing with the problems confronting each alike, to proceed along parallel lines—this Government retaining at all times its independence of judgment and freedom of action. For nations which seek peace to assume with respect to each other attitudes of complete aloofness would serve only to encourage, and virtually invite, on the part of other nations lawlessly inclined, policies and actions most likely to endanger peace.

In the present Far Eastern emergency, we have consistently collaborated with other peace-seeking nations in the manner I have just described. I have said often, and I repeat again, that in this collaboration there is not a trace of alliance or involvement of any sort. We have scrupulously followed and we intend to follow the traditional policy of our country not to enter into entangling alliances or involvements with other countries.

When the Brussels Conference was called, this country, as one of the original signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty and in accordance with its treaty obligations thus assumed, promptly accepted the invitation to the conference. Our delegation cooperated fully with the representatives of the other conference powers in examining the situation in the Far East and exploring methods of bringing about peace by processes of agreement. The conference made a substantial contribution toward keeping alive principles of world order and of respect for the pledged word. Its declarations placed a new emphasis upon the deep concern of peaceful nations over any developments that threaten the preservation of peace.

In connection with the Far Eastern situation, this Government was confronted with the question of applying the existing neutrality legislation which was designed primarily to keep our Nation out of war. After mature deliberation, the conclusion was reached that in the circumstances attending the controversy in the Far East—a type of circumstances which the authors of the legislation could scarcely have visualized—application of the law would be most likely to endanger the very objectives which the law was designed to promote. Accordingly, exercising the discretion vested in him by the law itself, the President has refrained from putting the provisions of that law into operation. At the same time, in pursuance of our general policy of avoiding unnecessary risks, the President announced, on September 14, 1937, that "merchant vessels owned by the Government of the United States will not hereafter, until further notice, be permitted to transport to China or Japan any of the arms, ammunition, or implements of war which were listed in the President's proclamation of May 1, 1937," and that "any other merchant vessels, flying the American flag, which attempt to transport any of the listed articles to China or Japan will, until further notice, do so at their own risk."

Non-Interference Policy Pursued.

Our Government pursues, in relation to every world area alike, a policy of non-interference, with ill-will toward no nation and a sincere desire to be friendly with all. At the same time, we endeavor to afford appropriate protection to American citizens and American interests everywhere. During recent months, as throughout the past 150 years, the Government of the United States has sought to exercise moral influence and to co-operate in every practicable way with all peace-seeking nations in support of those basic principles which are indispensable to the promotion and maintenance of stable conditions of peace.

We have affirmed on every possible occasion and have urged upon all nations the supreme need for keeping alive and for practicing sound fundamental principles of relations among civilized nations. We have never entertained and we have not the slightest intention to entertain any such notion as the use of American armed forces for "policing the world." But we equally have not the slightest intention of reversing a tradition of a century and a half by abandoning our deep concern for, and our advocacy of, the establishment everywhere of international order under law, based upon the well-recognized principles to which I have referred. It is our profound conviction that the most effective contribution which we, as a nation sincerely devoted to the cause of peace, can make—in the tragic conditions with which our people, in common with the rest of mankind, are confronted today—is to have this country respected throughout the world for integrity, justice, good will, strength, and unswering loyalty to principles.

The foregoing is the essence of our foreign policy. The record is an open book. We spare no effort to make known the facts regarding our attitude, our objectives and our acts. We are always ready to furnish to the members of the Congress essential information. You, gentlemen, have first-hand knowledge of our constant effort to keep the press and the public informed.

Cannot Give Out A Detailed Chart.

There is one thing that we cannot do. And that is, to prepare and to place before every government of the world a detailed chart of the course of policy and action which this country will or will not pursue under any particular set of circumstances. No man, no nation, can possibly foresee all the circumstances that may arise. Moreover, to attempt to make such a detailed chart of future action would merely result in impairing our effectiveness in working for the one objective toward which we constantly strive and on which, I am certain, there is not a vestige of disagreement among the people of our country—the establishment of durable peace.

So strong, indeed, is the desire of this country for peace that many measures have been suggested toward our keeping out of war—some of them in complete disregard of both experience and practicability. It has been urged that we apply the neutrality law automatically in all circumstances, without adequate consideration of the possible consequences of such action for our own peace and for the safety of our citizens. It has been urged that we withdraw precipitately from any part of the world in which violators of international decencies choose to assert themselves. It has even been urged that we change the very basis of our representative form of Government in a frantic search for something which the proposers assume would make it more likely that this country avoid war.

I take it for granted that all of us alike are sincere friends of peace. This makes it all the more necessary for every one of us to scrutinize carefully every measure proposed, lest in our attempts to avoid war we imperil the chances of preserving peace.

The problem of the form of government best adapted to this country's needs was one with which the founders of our Republic came to grips in those stirring days when the structure of our independent national existence was being given form and substance. After exhaustive deliberation and discussion, they decided upon the system of representative democracy in preference to that of pure democracy as the system through which the people could best safeguard their liberty and promote their national security and welfare. The wisdom of the founders of this Nation in deciding, with conspicuous unanimity, to place the conduct of foreign relations in the hands of the Federal Government has stood the test of generations as providing the most effective means that can be devised for assuring the peace, the security and the independence of our people.

War Referendum Held Unnecessary.

What warrant is there, in reason or in experience, for the assumption—which underlies such proposals as the plan for a popular referendum on the subject of declaring war—that the Chief Executive and the Congress will be at any time more eager and more likely to embark upon war than would be the general body of citizens to whom they are directly responsible? No President and no Congress have ever carried this country into war against the will of the people. On the other hand, there is not a vestige of doubt that the adoption of a procedure like the referendum plan would hopelessly handicap the Government in the conduct of our foreign relations in general and would thus disastrously impair its ability to safeguard the interests of the Nation, in the forefront among which is that of peace.

Likewise dangerous, from the viewpoint of the preservation of peace, is the proposal that we retire from the Far East, comprising the chief portion of the Pacific area. Unfortunately, many people in this country have wholly misunderstood the position and policy of our Government in relation to that situation. Some have visualized only our trade and investment relationships with China, or our moral and cultural interests there, symbolized by missionary, educational, medical and similar activities. Some have concentrated their attention solely upon the incidental and exceptional facts of the existence of extraterritoriality and the maintenance of some armed forces to assist in safeguarding our nationals against possible mob violence and similar disorders—special rights which it is our policy to give up and forces which it is our policy to withdraw the moment the unusual conditions disappear.

All these are important. But the interest and concern of the United States—whether in the Far East, in any other part of the Pacific area, in Europe, or anywhere else in the world—are not measured alone by the number of American citizens residing in a particular country, or by the volume of investment and trade, or by exceptional conditions peculiar to the particular area. There is a much broader and more fundamental interest—which is, that orderly processes in international relationships—based on the principles to which I have referred be maintained.

Basic Principles Are Seen at Stake.

As I have already indicated, what is most of all at stake today, throughout the world, is the future of the fundamental principles which must be the foundation of international order as opposed to international anarchy. If we and others were to abandon and surrender these principles in regard to the Pacific area, which is almost one-half of the world, we would have to reconcile ourselves to their certain abandonment and surrender in regard to the other half of the world.

It would be absurd and futile for us to proclaim that we stand for international law, for the sanctity of treaty obligations, for non-intervention in internal affairs of other countries, for equality of industrial and commercial rights and opportunities, for limitation and reduction of armaments—but only in one-half of the world, and among one-half of the world's population. The catastrophic developments of recent years, the startling events of the past weeks, offer a tragic demonstration of how quickly the contagious scourge of treaty-breaking and armed violence spreads from one region to another.

Those who contend that we can and should abandon and surrender principles in one-half of the world clearly show that they have little or no conception of the extent to which situations and developments in any part of the world of today inevitably affect situations and conditions in other parts of the world. The triumph of this seclusionist viewpoint would inescapably carry the whole world back to the conditions of medieval chaos, conditions toward which some parts of both the Eastern and Western worlds are already moving. Such is the fate to which extreme isolationists—isolationists at any price—all those who contend that we should neither protest against abuses nor cooperate with others toward keeping principles alive, those who say that under no circumstances should we insist upon any rights beyond our own territorial waters—such is the fate to which blind extremism of this type would consign this country and the world.

Doctrine of Force Momentous Question.

The momentous question—let me repeat—is whether the doctrine of force shall be come enthroned once more and bring in its wake, inexorably, international anarchy and a relapse into barbarism, or whether this and other peaceful nations, fervently attached to the principles which underlie international order, shall work unceasingly—singly or in co-operation with each other, as circumstances, their traditional policies and their enlightened self-interest may dictate—to promote and preserve law, order, morality and justice as the unshakable bases of civilized international relations.

We might, if we could reconcile ourselves to such an attitude, turn our backs on the whole problem and decline the responsibility and labor of contributing to its solution. But let us have no illusions as to what such a course of action would involve for us as a Nation.

It would mean a break with our past, both internationally and domestically. It would mean a voluntary abandonment of some of the most important things that have made us a great Nation. It would mean an abject retreat before those forces which we have, throughout our whole national history, consistently opposed.

It would mean that our security would be menaced in proportion as other nations came to believe that, either through fear or through unwillingness, we did not intend to afford protection to our legitimate national interests abroad, but, on the contrary, intended to abandon them at the first sign of danger. Under such conditions, the sphere of our international relationships—economic, cultural, intellectual and other—would necessarily shrink and shrivel, until we would stand practically alone among the nations, a self-constituted hermit state.

Thrown back upon our own resources, we would find it necessary to reorganize our entire social and economic structure. The process of adaptation to a more or less self-contained existence would mean less production and at higher costs; lower living standards; regimentation in every phase of life; economic distress to wage earners and farmers and to their families, and the dole on an ever-increasing scale.

Peril of Decadence In Nation Is Cited.

All this we would be doing in pursuit of the notion that by so doing we would avoid war. But would these policies, while entailing such enormous sacrifices and rendering the Nation more and more decadent, really give us any such assurance?

Reason and experience definitely point to the contrary. We may seek to withdraw from participation in world affairs, but we cannot thereby withdraw from the world itself. Isolation is not a means to security; it is a fruitful source of insecurity.

We want to live in a world which is at peace; in which the forces of militarism, of territorial aggression, and of international anarchy in general will become utterly odious, revolting and intolerable to the conscience of mankind; in which the doctrine of order under law will be firmly established; in which there will no longer be one code of morality, honor, justice and fair play for the individual in his relations with other individuals, and an entirely different code for governments and nations in their relations with each other. We want to live in a world in which fruitful and constructive international relationships can serve as a medium for disseminating throughout the world the benefits of the material, spiritual, and moral progress of mankind.

To that end we will continue to give full and sincere adherence to the fundamental principles which underlie international order; we will continue to urge universal acceptance and observance of these principles; we will continue, wherever necessary and in every practicable and peaceful way, to co-operate with other nations which are actuated by the same desires and are pursuing the same objectives; we will persevere in appropriate efforts to safeguard our legitimate rights and interests in every part of the world, and we will, while scrupulously respecting the rights of others, insist on their respecting our rights.

To that end we will continue to strive, through our reciprocal trade program and through other economic policies, to restore the normal processes and to expand the volume of mutually beneficial trade among the nations, which is indispensable to an increase of production, employment, purchasing power, and general economic wellbeing here and everywhere; we will continue to promote peace through economic security and prosperity; we will continue to participate in the numerous international scientific, technical and other conferences and collaborative efforts which have been such powerful influences in assisting the stream of new ideas, of new discoveries, of learning and culture, to flow throughout the world; and we will continue to urge other nations to give their support to such policies and efforts.

We believe that a world at peace, with law and justice prevailing, is possible, and that it can be achieved by methods to some of which I have referred. That is the cornerstone of our foreign policy—a policy graphically described by President Roosevelt when he said:

"There must be positive endeavors to preserve peace. America hates war. America hopes for peace. Therefore, America actively engages in the search for peace."

The objectives of our foreign policy are as easy to grasp as they are fundamental. The means we are using to attain these objectives are the only means approved by reason and by experience. For the sake of the best interests of our people, we must maintain our strength, our courage our moral standards, our influence in world affairs—and our participation in efforts toward world progress and peace. Only by making our reasonable contribution to a firm establishment of a world order based on law can we keep the problem of our own security in true perspective and thus discharge our responsibility to ourselves—to America of today and to America of tomorrow. No other course would be worthy of our past or of the potentialities of this great democracy of which we are all citizens and in whose affairs we all participate.

Many Drivers Bring Peril by Wrong Turns

(How well are District traffic regulations observed by the average motorist? How well are the regulations enforced by police? To answer these questions, The Post sent its traffic reporter on a cruising observation assignment. In today's story—the second of a series—stress is laid on the law pertaining to proper turns and hand signals.—Editor's note.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Even before the light changed, he started turning the wheels and easing his car into the crosswalk area. With the first flash of amber he was off. Cutting across two lanes of traffic he made a right turn and roared north.

He ignored other motorists—didn't even favor them with a hand signal of his intentions. There was much screeching of brakes as half a dozen cars ground to a sudden stop to let him complete the illegal and hazardous turn.

Police Car Offends.

This — observed at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvnaia avenue northwest— was just one of many similar examples of motoring madness on Washington streets yesterday.

During a four-hour tour of principal thoroughfares in all sections of the city, less than a dozen motorists were seen using hand signals for turns and stops. In most cases, drivers sat behind tightly closed windows, making it impossible to signal even had they wanted to.

In one instance at Third street and Constitution avenue northwest a police car swerved for a left turn. The driver failed to let the motorist behind know of his intentions and the result was a near-collision.

Law Gives Directions.

A few blocks further a District government auto swung from an outside lane to make a left turn. He made it, but with inches to spare.

Inspector William E. Holmes, police supervisor of traffic, has recently laid much stress on the importance of enforcing proper turns.

Says the law:

"Approach for a right turn shall be made in the lane of traffic nearest the right-hand side of the highway and as closely as practicable to the right-hand curb . . .

"The driver of any vehicle intending to draw out from the curb or from any parking space shall indicate such intention by extending the hand and arm horizontally from and beyond the left side of the vehicle."

Drivers Pass on Hills.

Yesterday's observation cruise was marked by a narrow escape from mishap on upper Massachusetts avenue northwest. A light delivery truck, traveling at high speed, careened across the center line to pass a slow-moving car on the upgrade. The truck forced this writer's car to the right-hand curb.

Numerous instances of passing on hills and curves were observed in Rock Creek Park.

Traffic officials have appealed repeatedly to Washington drivers for observance of the hand-signal and proper-turn laws. But in spite of this, there were few indications yesterday that local motorists took the warnings seriously.

Farm Hand Kills Wife Of Boss and Visitor

East Montpelier, Va., March 17 (AP).—A 35-year-old farmhand, Percy McLoud, today confessed that he slew the wife of his employer and a man visitor at her farmhouse because they taunted him. The dead were Mrs. Grace Spear, 45, and Paul Max Chapman, 35, of Medford, Mass.

Violate the Traffic Laws? I Can, But Not You!

Post Staff Photos.

The Post traffic reporter didn't have far to go yesterday to find traffic law violators. Upper photo shows a hurried motorist cutting across two lanes of traffic at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue to make a right turn. A taxi almost hit him! A car with diplomatic tags nonchalantly holds down a "No Parking at Any Time" zone at Vermont avenue and H street northwest (inset). Lower, a car fills the cross walk at E street near Fourteenth—there's a lot of parking space behind, but it's jammed against the car in front. A reminder was left by Policeman F. N. Weber, First Precinct.

by Helen Reilly

"Hello, McKee—what's the rush? Working on another mystery?"

"Yes—my favorite case, Doctor. Mr. Dwyer says that fine rye flavor is hard to capture, but I'm taking him the evidence that it can be done."

"Here you are, Mr. Dwyer—BLACK HAWK Straight Rye. And here's the clue that it tastes right: it's made by Hiram Walker."

"You win, McKee. Let's get some glasses and destroy the evidence!"

EVIDENCE THAT WILL CONVINCE ANY RYE JUDGE!

Are you a judge of fine rye whiskey? Then you know that it's the hardest of all whiskies to make. The fact that BLACK HAWK is made by Hiram Walker in the world's largest distillery is circumstantial evidence that it's made right and aged right. But the rich, robust rye taste is the evidence that will convince you! Try BLACK HAWK at your favorite bar or liquor store and judge for yourself!

*X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, MARCH 18, 1938 21

This Morning

Jimmy Wasdell Adds Fire to Nationals.

By Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla.

If it's youth aflame with ambition plus a dash of recklessness that Mr. Clark Griffith wants on his ball team—and he has been saying that he does — then he wants young James Charles Wasdell, on whose services he has a lease.

This fellow Wasdell whose first basing talents can best be gauged by the fact that Griffith was moved to separate himself from $20,000 to purchase him a year ago, is a thoroughly untamed young rookie. With no more regard for conventions than a Hottentot, the lad came into the Nats' camp three weeks ago and brazenly proclaimed that he'd be the Nats' No. 1 first baseman, Joe Kuhel notwithstanding.

POVICH.

He's a baby-faced sort of kid just past voting age but that cherubic pan of Wasdell's is plenty incongruous. He bristles. There's more than a trace of a strut in his manner as he moves about the Nats' camp and it is, in fact, a chip-on-the-shoulder attitude. He's a little toughie, if needs be.

He came up to the big leagues the hard way for all his meteoric rise. They chased him out of the Cleveland ball park a half dozen years ago. He had been graduated from gathering pop bottles in the stands after the game to score-card peddling and was envisioning the day when he would be big enough to get a tryout with the Indians.

* * * *

Promotion came fast to little Wasdell. From score-card selling in the stands he was advanced to score-card selling at the front gate. That was something for a 16-year-old kid to achieve in that Cleveland park. Only the old fogies on the force got that soft front-gate job with its better pay.

They let him pitch to the hitters in early batting practice sometimes and little Jimmy liked to fancy himself as a big leaguer some day. He was getting to be some shucks as a pitcher on the Cleveland sandlots, the same dirt diamonds that had produced Joe Vosmik, George Uhle and Joe Kuhel. He was learning plenty about baseball in the Cleveland park and then he lost his job.

He reported late for scorecard-selling duty and was fired by the concessionaire. It seems that a dice game under the stands had detained little Jimmy. He had his pockets lined with dimes and quarters, but he didn't have a job any more, he learned.

"You're fired," said the concessionaire.

If little Jimmy had been wearing a collar, he would have been hot under it. "Listen, you big bloke," he told his boss, "I'll find a better job than this. Some day my name will be on those scorecards and you'll still be selling 'em."

* * * *

Last season he failed by two days to make that boast good. Forty-eight hours after the Washington club had made its farewell appearance of the year in the Cleveland park, Wasdell joined the Nats. His name would have been on that big league scorecard.

The Cleveland bosses who had ignored the kid who had been hanging around their park took a sudden interest in Wasdell in 1935 when he blossomed, not as a pitcher, but as a star first baseman of the Cleveland amateur team that won the national amateur championship. They signed him to a contract and sent him to their Zanesville farm in the Middle Atlantic League. All he did with Zanesville was to lead the league in hitting and set a new record for two-base hits.

There's something more than grim determination about Wasdell. The lad is nursing a kind of peeve. He thinks he has been turned around by both the Cleveland and Washington clubs. He thinks he would have been playing as the regular first baseman of the New York Giants these past two years if it hadn't been for baseball politics. Bill Terry offered to buy him for $30,000 in 1936, when he was starring for Nashville, but Cleveland packed him off to the minors again for future reference.

* * * *

At the start of the 1936 season, Cleveland sold him to Minneapolis, but a month later he was transferred to Nashville. That year he hit .341 and, despite his absence from 50 games, occasioned when his jaw was broken by a pitch delivered by Dick Lanahan, he failed by only two home runs to lead the league in that department.

Eventually, Cleveland had to sell Wasdell to Washington. He was a "hot" player, and Judge Landis would have stepped in and declared him a free agent, due to Cleveland's attempts to "cover

Doc Murphy Beats Valdez

Tosses Mexican on Mat at Turner's Arena.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Sure and 'twas afther being a foine performance Dr. John Murphy gave the Irish last night at the arena, a fighting climax to their St. Patrick's Day celebration. And, 'twas a foine dropkick, b'gorry, he used on Bronko Valdez to pin him after 26 minutes of action that would have warmed the cockles of the old Cork County hussies' hearts.

And, as if the wrestlers didn't generate enough excitement, the bald-headed guy in the third pew, who is continually ordering the artists to come down "and fight like a man," finally lost his temper completely and went up in the ring after Chief Chewaki. The Chief would have no truck with him, so the gent with the nude cranium turned on Referee Bortnick, and was persuaded to resume his seat in the audience, with a good stiff punch on the jaw as a souvenir of the evening.

There were some other good matches, too, even though not manufactured by Irishmen. Chewaki was introduced as O'Chewaki, and wore a green neckpiece for luck. Referee Paddy Bortnick removed it, however, which probably accounts for the Chief's downfall at the hands of Dean Detton. A leg-lock was the winning hold, clamped on after 15 minutes of honest toil.

In the remaining bouts, Jose Rodriguez and Tony Siana wrestled to a draw; ditto for Hans Steinke and Ram Singh, and Sam Cohen pinned hefty Louis Bacigulapi in the unbelievable time of 4½ minutes. It wasn't strictly union, but Referee Cyclone Burns was pretty sore about Cohen bouncing his carcass on the canvas—mistakingly, of course, and appeared glad to get it over with.

Bacigulapi, howver, insisted on earning his pay, and soon had Cohen, Burns and the two seconds locked in a ponderous bear hug. It looked like wrestling's version of the "big apple."

Wrestling in customary style, Valdez attempted to knee, bite and choke Murphy at the outset of the bout, and did cause the young and handsome medico apparent pain, but, it being St. Patrick's night, Murphy felt free to indulge in a little fisticuffing himself. He played "Erin Go Braugh" with his firsts on Valdez's ribs, and while it had a slight Mexican echo, the fans appreciated it.

Valdez tossed Murphy over his head a couple of times, but promptly ducked to cover when the latter rushed back and forth across the ring—as is his habit when working himself up to a dropkick. The Doctor was at his best. The winning dropkick, and two previous efforts, were flawless, catching Valdez on the point of his chin. A body press finished the foreigner.

Woodward Team Increases Lead

Woodward & Lothrop's bowling team increased its lead on first place to 51 games by sweeping its set from the second-place Hecht Co. last night in the Department Store League at Recreation.

Al McDonald's 373 featured Lansburgh's sweep over the third-place Credit Bureau while Hahn's Shoes took a 2-1 decision from Raleigh Haberdasher despite Ralph Scott's 382.

In other matches Kann's took the odd skirmish from Lamb Seal & Stencil Co. despite Clayton Brown's 354, while Guy-Curran took a 2-1 decision from Jelleff's.

Buss Prevost rolled a 152 game in the War Department League at Arcadia to share the night's honors with Carroll Daly, of the Statistics team, who cracked out a 381 set.

Team honors went to Washington Aqueduct, with a 592 game, and Statistics with a 1,749 set.

First round games in the Post-A. A. U. basketball championships are to be taken as a criterion, the eleventh annual event, which opened on three floors last night, will be the most thrilling ever held.

Of three games staged at Tech gym in the heavier classes, one was a runaway but the others were real thrillers, not decided until the final minutes of play. The strong F. B. I., defending unlimited champion, routed K. of C., 50-15, while Lubeseal, a contender for the unlimited title, had to overcome an 11-1 deficit to nip Intellects Club, 39-26. Prior to that contest, the Boys Club of Washington Fleetwings and Goode Cleaners had combined to put on a point-for-point duel which went into an extra period before the Fleetwings won out, 37-36.

In the 100-pound encounters at Boys Club of Washington and Merrick Boys Club gyms, Northeast Boys Club swamped Georgetown Boys Club, 30-15, and Police Boys Club No. 4 eked out a 15-13 victory over its brethren from No. 10. In other games, Boys Club of Washington, northeast branch, had the honor of capturing the first 85-pound game ever scheduled in the tournament when it nosed out Merrick Boys Club, 17-6, and Georgetown Boys Club, 17-6, and W. E. B. C. defeated Roosevelt B. C., 59-12. The latter was a 115-pound game.

Good Card Tonight.

An exceptionally attractive card is scheduled for tonight, with the debuts of Senate Beer, in the unlimited and Roosevelt Boys Club, in the 145, as the features of a six-game program.

Senate, a formidable contender in the Heurich Cup League, and one of four seeded teams in the unlimited class, meets Treasury Accounts and Deposits at 9 o'clock at Tech gym. Roosevelt B. C., a favorite in the 145-pound division, tackles the dangerous Alex Browdy five in a 4 o'clock opener in the same gym.

Rounding out the second-night card are a pair of hot 130-pound contests, both to be held at the Boys Club of Washington. In the first at 7:15, Roosevelt C. C. Boys Club takes on Merrick Boys Club and one hour later, the Presidents meet Stewart Bros. Photographers.

Last night's games revealed one important thing, at least. The team that aspires to F. B. I.'s unlimited crown will have to knock off the ever-powerful G-Men enroute. Led by Lavelle (Dizzy) Dean, the former Eastern High star, and Joe Robinson, a product of Elmira (N. Y.) High, Edgar Hoover's proteges were most impressive in victory.

Jones Opens Tourney.

After the tournament had been officially launched by a toss by Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Post, the Feds turned on a basket barrage that clinched the decision as early as the first half. With Robinson and Dean accounting for the first 10 points, F. B. I. soared into a 17-0 lead before the outclassed K. of C. could locate the basket. Not until 19½ minutes of the first half had elapsed did the Knights score a field goal.

The Fleetwings took their game from Goode in the final minute of the extra session. A basket by Jerry Zanallotti and another by Hathaway were the winning points.

The Intellects Club, composed of this year's American University varsity, gave favored Lubeseal quite a scare before falling before a hot second half attack. With Hugo Schulze and George Brown heading the offense, the Intellects hopped off to a 8-0 lead, holding Lubeseal scoreless for 15 minutes. But in the second half the complexion of the game rapidly changed when Ollie Tipton and Sam Fox teamed together to flip in points when they were most needed.

By the United Press.

Miss Hemphill and Miss Dettweiler had won two matches and halved one.

Three teams had won two matches and were tied for runner-up honors. They were Patty Berg, Minneapolis, and Jane Cothran Jameson, West Palm Beach; Alice Rutherford, Allamunchy, N. J., and Marian MacDougall, Portland, Oreg., and Barbara Bourne, Augusta, Ga. and Isabel Ogilivie, Cleveland, Ohio.

Griff to Announce Player Deal When Completed Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., (Friday) March 18.—Clark Griffith will announce a trade today, details of which will be completed this morning, his intimates here revealed.

The trade is believed to be a revival of the Bonura-Kuhel deal or possibly some business over a catcher with the Cincinnati Reds.

Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, was in Tampa yesterday, conferring with several unidentified persons. Griffith would not reveal his intentions last night, saying only that arrangements were incomplete.

New Nats, No. 5

May Go to Charlotte Unless He Hits.

No, and it's not Jacob Early . . . just Jake . . . They never gave him any other name . . . Seems as though they don't go in for fancy monickers up there in the North Carolina mountains, where Jake lives with his folks . . . At Kings Mountain, N. C., to be exact . . . Is at the Nats' training camp for the second year. . . . This 22-year-old lad who couldn't make the grade with Washington last spring has been serving time at Chattanooga and Charlotte since . . . Was the regular catcher at both places and is tabbed as having possibilities . . . Works with his folks in the cotton mills in the off season . . . Sits behind the loom, making "fillings," whatever they are . . . Zinn Beck, a Washington scout, picked him up off the North Carolina lots in 1935 and took the gangling kid to Chattanooga . . . Which sent him to Jacksonville in 1936 . . . Blossomed fast at Jacksonville and was touted as a prize prospect when they brought him in to Orlando last spring . . . But he did not justify that praise and was shunted back to Chattanooga . . . Charlotte got him in midseason . . . Plenty aggressive behind the plate, with a superb throwing arm, but his hitting record is against him. Batted only .222 last season . . . Was regarded as a powerful hitter the year before, but somehow did not improve when he faced improved pitching . . . Can't understand, himself, why he doesn't hit better . . . Always could, he says . . . Has tried all kinds of new stances at the plate and has been advised lately to stand up there a la Sam Rice—feet close together, elbows high, and take a long, smooth stride toward the pitch . . . Shared the catching duties with Herbert Crompton at Charlotte last season, but was recalled by the Nats in preference to Crompton because he was deemed to have more possibilities . . . Says he doubts if he's any relation to famed Gen. Jubel Early, Confederate leader who almost captured Washington . . . But would not exactly be surprised if he were. He's the antithesis of a fresh kid and you'd like him.

Bethesda Cagers Awarded Letters

Bethesda-Chevy Chase's basketball team was honored at a general school assembly yesterday, at which time Coach Allen Vogt presented letters to players. The team enjoyed one of its best seasons on the court after a slow start.

Minor League Prexy Admits Investigation

By the Associated Press.

Belleair, Fla., March 17.—Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, has conducted a thorough investigation of the St. Louis Cardinals farm system and may release 100 Class D players into free agency, it was learned today.

Though the tight-lipped commissioner refused to discuss the investigation other than to say, "You know as much about it as I do," Judge W. G. Bramham, boss of the minor leagues, admitted the investigation had been made and that an announcement was expected within a few days. Judge Bramham, however, said he had no idea of how the commissioner would rule in the case.

"All I can say," said Judge Bramham, "is that the investigation has been made. What Commissioner Landis will do or when he'll do it is something I cannot say."

The case before Commissioner Landis is a charge the Cardinals entered into a working agreement with the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) club of the Three Eye League without advising the commissioner.

It is charged the Cardinals shipped between 25 and 100 players from its rookie camp, at Springfield, Mo., in 1935, 1936 and 1937 to Cedar Rapids, which in turn farmed the players to some of its own affiliates such as Mitchell, S. Dak.; Crookston, Minn., and Newport, Ark.

As far as Judge Bramham knows all the players involved are Class D or E players picked up by the Cardinals in their "come one come all" Springfield camp. Their names have been kept secret.

Goslin Works Out With Nats; Seeks Contract for 1938

Orlando, Fla., March 17.—On trial after 17 years of stardom in the major leagues, Leon (Goose) Goslin today began his bid for a Washington contract.

The broad-beamed outfielder, who, at 37, is essaying a comeback after his release by the Tigers, worked out in a Washington uniform, but judgment on his condition is still being withheld by Owner Clark Griffith.

Goslin showed no evident signs of unfitness as he engaged in an hour-long batting game, shagged flies in the outfield and took three turns around the park.

"I have been working out for the past month at Miami," said the Goose. "Every day after playing golf, I was throwing to my caddy and chasing flies. I'm fit."

Ivy League Agrees to Curb Spring Grid Drill Emphasis

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, N. J., March 17.—Nine Eastern colleges, through a gentleman's agreement, have nipped in the bud a growing tendency to make intercollegiate football a two-season sport.

Elton E. (Tad) Wieman, Princeton's new head football coach, made that announcement today at a "get-acquainted" luncheon for Wieman, his staff and the press.

"In the last few years," said Wieman, "colleges have been making so much of spring scrmimages and practice games with other schools that, to all intents and purposes, they were playing two schedules. The partners to this new agreement—the six other members of the 'Ivy League,' Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Cornell, Pennsylvania and Dartmouth, as well as Army and Navy—will do away with that beginning this spring."

Princeton itself played Lehigh and St. Joseph's last spring, while Columbia scrimmaged with Manhattan, Villanova, Lafayette and Rutgers, and Cornell had practice games with Colgate and Bucknell.

Wieman, who succeeded Herbert O. Crisler as head coach when the latter went to Michigan, reiterated his belief in the value of spring practice, but admitted that so far he has been unable to formulate any opinion regarding the chances of his 1938 team.

"We've been practicing for only three days," he explained, "and, beyond being able to tack the right names to the proper faces, we haven't been able to get very far. It's been so foggy that we've had all we could do to identify players halfway across the field."

Frankie Parker, Net Champ, Marries His Coach's Wife

By the United Press.

Reno, Nev., March 17.—Mrs. Katherine Audrey Browne Beasley, of New York, today diverced Mercer Beasley, internationally known tennis coach, and then immediately was married to Frankie Parker, 22-year-old protege of Beasley and Davis Cup team member.

Mrs. Beasley, mother of two children, Katherine, 21, and James, 14, obtained an uncontested divorce from Judge Clark J. Guild, of Carson City at a private hearing on her charge of extreme cruelty. They were married in New York, January 1, 1935.

In obtaining the marriage license Mrs. Beasley gave her age as over 21. Parker used his right name of Franciszek A. Pajkowski, and gave his address as Los Angeles. The ceremony was performed by Judge T. F. Moran of Reno.

Shortly after the ceremony the couple left for a honeymoon in Los Angeles.

Parker became a protege of Beasley when the latter found him as a boy in Milwaukee chasing tennis balls for $2 a week of which he gave all but 5 cents to his widowed mother.

Beasley took the youth into his home and sent him to Lawrenceville Prep School. Parker was National Boys tennis champion at 14 and at 17 he was National Clay Court champion. Last year he scored the winning point for the American Davis Cup team.

Huskie Boy Gallops In Tropical Feature, Pays Backers $16.30

Only 3-Year-Old and Longest Shot in Field Wins by 5 Lengths; Knowing Second, Gene Wagers Third.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 17.—W. C. Stroube's Huskie Boy, the only 3-year-old in the field and longest priced of the five started, romped to a hollow victory in the St. Patrick's Handicap before a good-sized crowd here this afternoon. The Bull Dog colt, paying $16.30, registered by five lengths, running the 5½ furlongs in 1:06 1-5. The track was fast despite light morning showers.

Kenneth McCombs was astride the winner for his second score on a program which the various events were named after the patron saint of Ireland. Hunch players collected both times, for McCombs was the only jockey performing with a "Mc" in his name.

Longchamps Farm's Knowing, a galloping winner of his last and favorite in the small field, took second money by a length and a half from J. Van Winkle's Gene Wagers. Lady Higloss was fourth and Double B. last.

Gene Wagers had the best of the start. He broke in advance of the others from the outside position but Huskie Boy, which had stopped badly in the recent race won by Bigey, had the foot to shoot through on the rail and take a daylight lead in the first furlong. The surprise horse kept increasing his lead and had nothing to fear in the stretch. Knowing saved ground and was hard ridden while overtaking Gene Wagers. Lady Higloss and Double B. were badly outrun.

Taut Makes Good.

Taut, recently claimed by the Cosgrave Stable for $1,500, carried his new silks to victory in the opening event for two-year-old maidens here this afternoon. With Ken McCombs replacing George Seabo as his saddlesmith, Taut held on gamely to score by a half length over the neglected Layover, which returned $70.90 for place. Darby Dean, the choice, was a belated third, a head behind. Taut ran down the fast-starting Giboir and was powerfully ridden to maintain a slight advantage to the wire. He returned $11.80.

Strange Times proved an easy winner over the sprinters in the second race. The Medway Stable's plater was taken into early command by Freddy Scheih and the others found the pace too fast, the $10.40 for two shot breezing past the wire three lengths in front. Tramway provided the contention after the first quarter mile and lasted to be second by a half length over Light Cruiser. Flickering, which drew most of the play, faltered badly after displaying a flash of early foot.

Wise Fox Scores.

A. G. Tarn's Wise Fox, a 2-to-1 favorite, raced to his second straight triumph in the third event of a mile and 60 yards. Well ridden by Johnny Longden, the 3-year-old son of Gallant Fox was restrained behind the early pace of Birdlea and Petit Fours. Longden clucked to the colt leaving the far side and his mount bounded to the front, opened up a comfortable lead and registered by two lengths. Becky Bates was a fast closing second, three lengths clear of Birdlea.

The favorite players again collected when Thursland, paying $8.10, gathered in the lion's share of the fourth purse by four lengths. Irving Anderson was aboard the gelding. Salavina and Jackie D., a pair of long shots, were next in line, a half length apart. Thursland collared the fast-starting Salavina at the head of the stretch and easily drew out. Jackie D. closed a big gap to menace Salavina in the closing strides.

Happy Knot was a strong choice in the seventh race but, after breaking off stride, tired chasing the pace and wound up fourth. The winner was Rebekah, which rushed into a safe lead and continued smoothly to click by two lengths under the veteran Jimmy Lynch. The mare paid $11.10. Mixwell came around the faster beginners and landed the place, nearly two lengths before Lady Maryland. The stirrups broke on Likewise during the post parade and the gelding got loose, running off for a mile before being caught.

Kenneth McCombs rounded out a riding triple when he guided Starwick home by three lengths at odds of $17.20 for $2 in the closing contest. Sweet Tone was second, with Putzen third.

Another upset occurred with the running of the mile and a sixteenth sixth race. Jack Patches, a $38.90 for two proposition, scored by a length and a half, giving the Cosgrave Stable a double. Stocks nosed out Terpsichore for second money. Porter Roberts broke Jack Patches in front and the combination never was headed. Buttermilk and then Terpsichore tried to keep up with the gelding.

Bill Introduced For Racing in D.C.

A similar bill in the House has been referred to the Judiciary subcommittee of the House District Committee.

TRAMWAY, eased off the early pace, began to better his position on the outside in the final three furlongs and outlasted LIGHT CRUISER in the stretch drive. LIGHT CRUISER, racing wide all the way, finished gamely in the final drive. FLICKERING was caught in a pocket soon after the start.

Griff Seeks Backstop to Aid Ferrell

Nats' Owner Is Plainly Disappointed Over Livingston.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., March 17.—In a near-heretical statement today, that perennial optimist, Clark Griffith, registered a note of alarm as he detected glaring weakness in the Washington team—its catching.

"We need another catcher in a hurry," declared Griffith. "Somebody who can step behind the plate if Rick Ferrell is hurt and do a fair job for us. We haven't had any good reserve catching for several years and I don't want it to happen again this season.

"Those young fellows we picked up—Mickey Livingston and Jake Early—don't shape up like the men we want. I'm disappointed in Livingston. Both Joe Engel and my son, Calvin, who had Livingston at Chattanooga last year, told me he might not hit much but that he was a good man behind the bat. He doesn't look like it."

Griffith was talking bluntly, an unusual tack for the Nats' owner, who is habitually considerate of the feelings of his young talent and can always dig up an optimistic note. He was actuated in his unfavorable appraisal of Livingston by the rookie's dismal debut in yesterday's game against the Cardinals.

Didn't Like Livingston.

"Why, he didn't show me anything at all," said Griffith. "I didn't expect him to hit but I didn't think he would be such a sucker for a fast ball down the middle. And the one throw to second base that he made was miserable. And he didn't show much 'action' behind the plate. I don't know what my scouts saw in him.

"We'll have to see him in a few more games, I guess, before we can pass judgment, but right now I'd like to lay my hands on an experienced catcher. I don't care if he hits only .200, if he can handle himself behind the bat. You never know when your first string catcher is going to get his hand in the way of a foul tip."

It has been no secret that Griffith is in a frenzy to add a veteran catcher to his staff. He has been on the long-distance phone daily in an attempt to buy a big league catcher. His latest attempts have veered toward the Cincinnati club, which boasts three acceptable catchers and may be in a mood to deal.

Tried to Make Deal.

It is known that on a recent trip to Clearwater, Fla., where he appeared before Judge Bramham, minor league commissioner, in an attempt to extricate Joe Cambria out of some current difficulty, Griffith stopped off at Tampa to talk trade with Manager Bill McKechnie, of the Reds.

McKechnie has Ernie Lombardi as his regular catcher and in "Spud" Davis and Gilly Campbell he possesses two other catchers, any one of whom would be welcomed by the Nats. Griffith is in a mood to go far higher than the waiver price of $7,500 if he can pry any one of the trio away from the National League.

A morning thunderstorm washed out the Nats' scheduled game with the Minneapolis club at Daytona Beach today, but when the sun made a late appearance Manager Bucky Harris herded his squad out to Tinker Field for a long workout. Infield drill and batting practice was dispensed with while groundkeepers repaired the diamond which was in foul shape.

Chunky Taft Wright, who has been regarded as no more than a utility outfielder, is commanding more respect in the Nats' camp today. His triple with the bases full against the Cardinals yesterday was the longest blow ever registered at Tinker Field. And inasmuch as Wright made the sock against left-handed pitching, Harris is revising his estimates of the stocky outfielder.

Joe Haynes, the tall right-hander who has slowly been recovering from an operation on his left arm, today was in uniform for the first time and is a week behind the other rookie pitchers. Inasmuch as Harris has not yet seen him work, he represents the lone remaining hope that the younger rookie hurlers will produce at least one shining prospect.

Mel (Battler) Almada, who engaged in the first fight of his baseball career yesterday when he tangled with Micky Owen, Cardinal catcher, today admitted that he provoked the fight. "Nobody could take the things I called Owen," said Almada. "It was my fault, but I don't want any catchers calling for bean-balls when I'm up there at the dish."

Five Nations Seeking 1944 Olympic Games

Cairo, Egypt, March 17 (U.P.).—The International Olympic committee announced tonight that five nations had entered their candidacies for the 1944 Olympic games.

The nations, with the cities advanced as sites for the thirteenth Olympiad, were: Budapest, Hungary; Lausanne, Switzerland; Helsingfors, Finland; Athens, Greece, and London, England.

Sport Fans Like to Pick Potential Babe Ruths, Jack Dempseys and Bill Tildens

By Walter Haight.

Most sport fans are talent scouts at heart. I believe we all harbor a keen desire to uncover a young unknown who will rocket to stardom in some branch of athletics. It must be a feeling of satisfaction to sit at a football battle, a ball game or a fight and be able to say, "See that boy go! I had a hand in getting him his big chance. I recognized his hidden ability before any other."

Perhaps it was only a word to a manager, a whisper to a trainer or a note to a coach. But if the ordinary sports fans had the tip of one finger in the pie that sent a boy upward in sports, he cherishes the thought forever.

Around the race tracks, the horsemen have a word for a person who is enthusiastic about the chances of a thoroughbred. That person is "high" on the horse.

Among the sports fans probably the least successful in discovering future sports greats are sports-writers. Most of them, and particularly myself, get "high" on athletes at the slightest pretext. For instance, if Clark Griffith took to training camp half of the ball players recommended by writers he probably would be president of the Salisbury Club in the Eastern Shore League now.

* * * *

Almost any 2-year-old who will eat an apple off the hand of a racing writer looms as a potential Derby winner in his mind. Let Johnny Doe, of the Anacostia Insects, make a one-handed, leaping catch of a line drive and the sandlot editor hustle back to the office and reports that he has discovered another Hans Wagner. If Dicky Roe goes around right-end 50 yards to a touchdown in the high school game, the scholastic editor immediately draws a mental picture of Dicky in the Notre Dame backfield.

Should the fight writer happen upon a street battle between two newsboys and the smaller uncorks a right that scatters his opponent in the gutter, he tells himself that he will look up this kid in a couple of years; might be another Jack Dempsey.

At the time I essayed to be the Judge Landis of the local sandlots I had big league scout complex that made me "high" on ball players. I not only wrote up sandlotters until their managers had to slit the back of their caps to make them fit their heads, but I also obtained minor league trials for many. Here and there I stumbled onto a winner because our leagues, with their thousands of players, had to turn out some good ones.

However, the vast majority of my future greats drank a cup of coffee with Danville or gargled a bowl of soup with Hagerstown and came home to die—or rather eat.

* * * *

As my average dwindled I took into my confidence the late Finney Kelly, who gained a measure of fame as pitcher for the Police nine. Kelly, a Southeast boy, had a peculiar delivery in which he whipped the ball behind his back on the wind-up. He had a terrific fast ball as a youth and when a player failed to duck one day down by the Navy Yard, his injuries were fatal.

If Kelly had been an effective pitcher before the unfortunate accident, he was tops hereabouts thereafter. Against one of the East's best colored teams, Kelly took a first inning lacing one day at old Union League park, but pitched shutout ball for the remainder of the game after one of the bettors, who backed Kelly's club, informed the opposition of the accident.

Finney was "discovered" many times during his sandlot baseball career. However, after giving up several good jobs to take a fling at the minors, where he found his fast ball needed more than a reputation, he just smiled when a self-appointed scout tried to get him a trial with some club.

* * * *

He had a favorite line that went something like this: "Walter, that boy you think will make a big leaguer, is a nice fellow; he comes from a good family; he is good to his mother; he uses excellent table manners; he dresses well; he uses fine English he is an upstanding young American—but, Walter, he can't hit. He had better stay home."

From the reports sizzling North on Sammy Baugh, I believe that Kelly's line applies. Great arm, good legs, fine head, excellent reputation—but if Sammy can't hit that onion, he might as well go home and save himself and the Cardinals a headache.

Now all Sammy Baugh has to do is to make good with the Cardinals, lead the National League in batting and I'll have the headache. In fact, I'm not feeling any too good right this minute.

Holy Name, St. Joe Win

Rivals Enter Parochial Court Finals.

Surviving a pair of pulsating semi-final games that had the fans on their collective feet most of the time, Holy Name and St. Joseph's gained the final round of the Parochial School Basketball Tournament yesterday at St. John's College gymnasium.

Holy Name eliminated St. Gabriel's, 22 to 14, but St. Joseph's needed an extra period to defeat St. Joseph's, 16 to 14, in one of the tournament's best games.

Mac McCauley, forward, tossed in the winning goal for St. Joseph's after the teams fought to a 14-to-14 stalemate in regulation time. He was high scorer of the game with 7 points.

Brogan, Holy Name center, led his mates to victory with 8 points. Leapley played an exceptionally good floor game for St. Gabriel's and made 6 points in the bargain.

Holy Name and St. Joseph's meet Saturday afternon at 2:30 o'clock on St. John's court, for the championship.

New Orleans, March 17 (AP).—The Mauler, a consistent performer of late for R. C. Hanna, broke in front and stayed there all the way to win the mile and 70 yards feature at the Fair Grounds today.

The 6-year-old son of Bulldog third in his previous start after winning the one before that, covered the distance in 1:45 flat to return his backers $14.60 for $2. Mrs. K. O'Neal's Oh Polly, an outsider, paying 6 to 1 to place, was runner-up in front of Mrs. C. M. Henderson's Miss Joker.

Jacobs Restricts Armstrong to 2 Scheduled Bouts

New York, March 17 (AP).—Promoter Mike Jacobs today laid down the law to Eddie Mead, manager of Henry Armstrong, forbidding "Hurricane Henry" to engage in any fights between his meeting with Lew Feldman March 30 and his clash with Barney Ross May 26.

The Feldman bout is slated for the New York Hippodrome. The Ross tilt is for the welterweight title, and Jacobs doesn't fant anything to happen to Henry in the meantime to prevent the match.

Jacobs explained that he realized Mead was negotiating for three or four matches between the Feldman bout and the Ross clash, but said that he would have to give up those plans.

Chewaki Detained 2 Hours by Police Seeking Robbers

Next St. Patrick's Day Chief Chewaki, the Oklahoma bad man, will stay home in bed, because yesterday brought him no good luck—only bad. Not the worst of it was a defeat suffered at Dean Detton's hands at the Arena. The worst was being detained two hours by Maryland State Police on suspicion of holdup and robbery.

Chewaki, with his wife and Bronko Valdez, the latter also a wrestler, was halted at gun point by two motorcycle policemen on the other side of Laurel, Md. The officers were on the lookout for two men and a woman in a high-powered car headed for Washington. The car bore Oregon tags.

The chief drives a large sedan, bearing (of all things) Oregon tags. And when the officers took a good look at his battle-scarred countenance—and another at Valdez's they were sure they had the holdup men. But the gasoline station proprietor who was robbed failed to identify them—to the wrestlers' great relief.

"I thought they wanted me for speeding," said the chief. "I was doing 85 when they caught me. But ni—it's hold-up men they're after. They oughtta be catching speeders on that road—not looking for burglars."

School Wrestlers To Be Honored

An assembly in honor of the wrestling team which won the Interscholastic Wrestling Tournament for junior high schools, will be held at noon today at Gordon Junior High.

Coach Fred Mulvey will receive the cup which will be presented by Harry C. (Pete) English, supervisor of boys' activities for the Community Center Department, which sponsored the tournament.

BROWNS BEAT SEMIPROS.

Cuero, Tex., March 17 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns opened their exhibition baseball schedule today with an 8-to-0 victory over the Victoria Gulf Oilers, semipro team.

The Browns bunched 9 of their 16 hits in the eighth inning to score 6 runs. Ollie Bejma, second baseman, collected 4 singles in 5 trips to the plate, while Beau Bell, who signed only Tuesday, got a single and double in 3 trips.

Pitcher Ed Linke faced only 9 men in 3 innings, and struck out 4, while Harry Kimberlin also retired 9 in order, 5 by strikeouts.

him up" in the minors and thus restrain his advancement. His record at Nashville called for a chance for Wasdell to make good in the majors.

When the Washington bosses last spring decided that Wasdell would benefit from another season in the minors and shipped him to Chattanooga, he almost rebelled. He was in a mood to carry his case to Landis, but desisted on the promise by Griffith that he would get the regular first-base job in 1938.

Well, here it is—1938—and here's Wasdell in the Nats' camp, after batting .319 for Chattanooga. And he wants that job. He's willing to battle Joe Kuhel for it, but he wants no more runarounds. If the Washington club packs him off before he has had a full chance to make good, he'll blow the lid off the entire "cover-up" business and get his release.

They let him play in 32 games with the Nats last fall and he batted only .255, but he won two games with home runs and he swatted out three triples. He promises to be the club's only power hitter, and the Nats need power no less than they need a guy to meet the pay roll.

If he were a right-handed hitter, he'd be more welcome with the Nats, who are surfeited with southpaw swingers, but Wasdell doesn't admit that his left-handed swinging is any handicap.

Abrams Manager Asks Protection for His Boy

Syd Fishel will rush in where preliminary boys fear to tread today—into the boxing commission offices—and promptly find himself knee deep in hot water, figuratively speaking. In brief, Fishel, George Abrams' manager, is going before the governing body to demand that a "competent" referee be assigned to work the Abrams-Jimmy Jones bout Monday night.

The commission's reply will be along the lines that all of its referees are "competent," and what does Mr. Fishel mean by asking for a "competent" arbiter? Then Fishel will have to explain, but, on second thought, he may be justified in going to the commission for added protection.

Jones, in the ring game parlance, is a "butter," a lad who uses his head as much as his hands, and Fishel is fearful lest he open a gash over Abrams' eye early in the fight, paving the way for a technical knockout victory over the local boy. Fishel wants a strict referee, one who will not hesitate to disqualify the Baltimorean after the customary warning—if he does butt.

Along Cauliflower Row, Jones is reported as a rough campaigner, who sometimes uses a kidney or rabbit punch, unintentionally, of course. Both are dangerous and have been outlawed in boxing for years, but Fishel wants it distinctly understood that if blows of this type are struck he wants his boy protected against them, by the official in charge.

Heine Blaustein, who handles Jones' business, also piloted Kid Williams, bantamweight champion of years ago, and George Chaney, who campaigned as a featherweight and lightweight. Williams is generally credited with being the first to use a kidney punch and won innumerable bouts with it.

Chaney compiled the greatest string of knockouts ever credited to one man, 101, and he relied on both the kidney and rabbit punches for a paralyzing effect. Johnny Kilbane finally whipped him in a match with Kilbane's featherweight crown at stake. Joe and Vince Dundee also used the punch and Blaustein managed them also.

Hence, it would seem that Fishel is making a wise move in asking for a strict job of officiating in the ring Monday night, although on form, Abrams appears able to handle the situation without a third man's assistance.

Jones has been going like Glenn Cunningham in the last year displaying the best form of his career. He holds two recent decisions over Tony Ciaccio, who whipped Abrams here but had the decision taken from him because of fouls. He also outpointed Gene Buffalo, Al Diamond, and a few other good boys.

Wheat Drops As Likelihood Of War Abates

Dust Storms in Southwest Cause Rallies From Bottom Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 17.—Something of a let-up in war-scare talk brought about lower prices here today for wheat—down 1¾ cents a bushel at times. Partial rallies from the day's bottom level in wheat values were caused by new dust storms threatening domestic crop areas Southwest. Notice also was taken of authoritative estimates that Canada has only 7,500,000 bushels of wheat remaining on farms.

On the wheat price recoveries, however, demand was not aggressive and traders showed a disposition to await the United States Government crop report looked for tomorrow.

Seaboard Locomotive Sets Steam Record

Atlanta, Ga., March 17.—Locomotives of 20 years ago did well to turn out 30,000 miles a year, but modern steam locomotives are capable of delivering 150,000 annually, and are actually worth much more than five times the older types, Robert S. Binkerd, vice president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, told the Southern & Southwestern Railway Club here today.

The survey, emphasizing the possibilities for more intensive use of equipment, revealed that a Seaboard Air Line locomotive in January established an American steam record of 20,049 miles in one month, and that another Baldwin-built 4-6-4 on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe recently completed a continuous run of 2,227 miles from Los Angeles to Chicago in regular schedule service.

Bank Clearings 25.5 Per Cent Under Year Ago

22 Leading Cities All Report Lower Volume for Week.

By the Associated Press

New York, March 17.—Bolstered by usual midmonth settlements and the first installment of the quarterly income tax payments, the volume of bank transactions expanded over that for the week preceding, although the rise was not equal to the similar 1937 week. Moreover, the decline from the previous year's level was broadened in the eighteenth consecutive dip.

Bank clearings for 22 leading cities of the United States for the week ended Wednesday, March 16, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., totaled $5,480,233,000, which contrasted with $7,358,198,000 for the like 1937 period, giving a decrease of 25.5 per cent. In the similar comparison for the week preceding there was a loss of 20.2 per cent.

At New York, clearings went to $3,552,958,000, a drop of 27.6 per cent from the 1937 figure of $4,910,230,000. Outside of New York, the aggregate was $1,927,275,000, or a decrease of 21.3 per cent from the $2,447,968,000 of last year. Clearings for the latest week rose $732,006,000 from the total for the week preceding.

Stock Market Regains Poise As Foreign Outlook Improves

Trading Volume Diminishes as Urge to Sell Is Checked; Railroad Shares Weak; Government Bonds Lower.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, March 17.—Early rallying tendencies faded from the stock market today and forenoon gains running to 2 or more points among leading industrials were reduced or transformed into losses of as much in the majority of cases at the close.

The initial come-back was attributed mainly to the slightly better overnight foreign outlook. The European war scare which toppled yesterday's world markets seemed to have waned a trifle, but the overseas situation was still considered by most financial observers to have highly explosive potentialities. A threatened British cabinet upset was far from helpful. The result was that buyers stepped carefully and selling ruled in the final hour.

The one encouraging factor to analysts was that volume died down. Transfers totaled 642,370 shares, compared with 1,023,500 on Wednesday's relapse. The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .5 of a point, at 41.7.

Backwardness of the rails was a depressing influence throughout. The composite for this group, for the first time in its lengthy slide, broke to a new low since 1932. Utilities also hit bottom since 1935.

Carriers did a bit better following the White House conference and announcement the President had appointed a committee of three from the Interstate Commerce Commission to formulate recommendations for "immediate" action by Congress in view of the "critical" condition of most roads. These stocks, however, slipped again in the final few minutes.

Gold Stocks at Year's Low.

Gold mining issues slumped to new 1938 lows, offerings here being in line with one theory that if war should come operating costs would soar and profits dwindle. Some selling of the mines was reported from abroad.

Foreign securities markets pushed up after their collapse of the previous day. European currencies also steadied in terms of the dollar but again skidded at the end as demand for American money once more became insistent.

Railway bonds fell sharply after exhibiting resistance before midday. Commodities generally leaned backward. Wheat at Chicago was off ¼ to 1 cent a bushel and corn was unchanged to up ¼. Cotton yielded 10 to 30 cents a bale.

Several good earnings statements for last year were published, and a few cheerful signs were seen here and there on the domestic business horizon, but these had little effect in lifting prices. Bank clearings were off from 1937 levels for the eighteenth consecutive week.

Homestake Mining, ex-dividend, was off 3¾ points at 53½. Dome lost 3⅝ at 47⅝, and McIntyre and Alaska Juneau were each down 1 at 36¼ and 9½, respectively.

Declines of fractions to a point or so were shown for Santa Fe at 30, Southern Pacific, 13; American Smelting, 46; General Motors, 33½; Chrysler, 50⅛; Sears-Roebuck, 57; Standard Oil of New Jersey, 48⅛; American Telephone, 128¾, and Western Union, 20⅛.

Moderately ahead were United States Steel, at 51¼; Bethlehem, 55¼; Kennecott, 35⅝; Boeing, 27⅛; Westinghouse, 89½, and Texas Corporation, 40¼.

Foreign Bonds Steady.

The bond market readjusted itself today after yesterday's touch of "war fever," and foreign bonds steadied, corporates dipped and United States Governments sold lower.

With a weather eye on stocks, which edged up, then declined, to finish lower, domestic railroad, industrial and utility issues followed a similar course. The brunt of losses were sustained by the rails.

Down 1 to 2 or more were Santa Fe 4s of '95, at 105; Great Northern 4½s of '77 E, at 79; Missouri-Kansas-Texas 5s of '62, at 36⅛; Southern Pacific 4½s of '68, at 42, and Southern Railway 4s of '56, at 33. Here and there scattered rail issues tilted up fractions—Erie 5s of '75 gained ⅛, at 13—but all in all losses outnumbered gains. The Associated Press average of 20 rail bonds declined .8 of a point.

Reflecting uncertainties of a fight of top executives for leadership in Alleghany Corp., top holding company of the former Van Sweringen rail empire, Alleghany 5s of '49 eased 1¼ at 56⅜, and the 5s of '50, stamped, dipped ⅞ at 30⅛. Armour 4s of '55 at 92 were up 1⅛ as the financial community heard meat prices, because of heavy consumption, are being edged upward. International Telephone 5s of '55 dropped 2¾ to 54¼ as new air raids menaced the company's properties in Spain.

The Associated Press average of ten industrial bonds, and the average of ten utility bonds fell .1 of a point each.

The Associated Press average of 10 foreign bonds was unchanged. Austrian 7s of 1957, which lost more than half their previous market value Monday in the first trading session following Nazi absorption of Austria, gained 2 yesterday at 32. Belgian 6s of 1955 closed at 102, up 1, and Polish 8s of 1950 at 48, up 1. Canadian 4s lost 1⅞ at 107, and French 7s of 1949, stamped, were down 2½ at 105. German 5½s of 1965 at 25½, and 7s of 1949 at 31 were fractionally lower.

United States Treasury issues in stock exchange dealings showed losses ranging up to 11-32s of a point, but traders said the recession was due to absence of buyers in a dull market, rather than to any pronounced selling pressure.

Transactions totaled $6,876,175, face value, against $7,237,425 Wednesday.

Brokers' Loans Drop $97,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $803,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $97,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,136,000,000.

G. A. Tomlinson Quits as Head Of Mo. Pacific

Expected to Side With Young in Fight for Van Sweringen Roads.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 17.—The spectacular fight for control of the remnants of the Van Sweringen rail empire today brought announcement that George A. Tomlinson, Cleveland shipping magnate and chairman of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, was resigning that post and a statement from the Guaranty Trust Co. that it intends to be neutral. The trust company holds a key position in the fight by virtue of its trustee holdings of capital stock of Chesapeake Corporation, intermediate holding company in the system.

Tomlinson's plan to resign, made public in Cleveland, was interpreted in railroad circles there as reflecting his intention to cast his lot with Robert R. Young, chairman of Alleghany Corporation, top holding company in the system, who is the leader of one faction. Young is seconded by Allan P. Kirby, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., chain store heir.

Young's chief known opponents in the fight are Charles R. Bradley and John P. Murphy, former Van Sweringen men, and officers and directors of the Chesapeake Corporation, 71 per cent of the stock of which, owned by Alleghany Corporation, is now held by Guaranty Trust Co., as trustee.

Spanish Dance Leads Nine Acts For the Lotus

By Chanticleer

Nine big acts starting with a captivating Spanish number provide the entertainment this week at the Lotus. The specialty team, Beryl and Martinex, will introduce to you a new Cuban rhumba, "The Fado." Another spectacular number is the Butterfly and Flower number with the lovely gals dressed as blossoms. Al Norton sings appropriate songs and Bill Strickland and his Capitolians provide music for dancing.

A dagger dance with the sparkle of an Oriental fakir brings the spell of the East into the colorful new floor show at the Russian Troika. Helen Hamilton's club has several new numbers. Liked best last night were the Two Grenadiers who won encores. This skit is based on an incident in Russia in 1812. While at the club, try, for a midnight supper dish, the flaming beef, Strogonoff, a favorite in the old days of Imperial Russia. This is a dish of the tenderest beef tenderloin and mushrooms served with a sauce that begs analyzing. It's a flavor that chefs in the old days must have guarded with their lives.

"Snow White" at Mayflower.

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs are to be found at the Mayflower Lounge. At least, says Dee Tracy, piquant cigarette girl, who made miniature dolls with the countenances of the seven musicians in Sidney's Orchestra and the lovely Maxine Tappan, feature songstress. Here is the line-up: Grumpy, Harold Veo; Doc, Moe Maer; Bashful Frank Coviello; Happy, Buddy Harman! Dopey, Ray Nelson;; Sleepy, Bob Simpson; Sneezy, Dick Koons, and Snow White, Maxine Tappan.

Of the various "nights" at the Raleigh's Pall Mall, Friday has been dedicated to the ladies. On that night there is no cover charge for them. The attractions this week are the lovely songstress, Nena Corrinda; the sensational dance team, Zanette and Manya, and, of course, music by the Pall Mall Orchestra.

Almost any night is "celebrity night" on the aftdeck of the Anchor Room of the Annapolis. This week a birthday crowd of Fort Myer officers did a little elbow bending to the song styling of the petite starlet, Anne Nigra. Featured tune tinkler at the piano is Tommy Johnson.

The Madrillon is one of the better spots in town that continue to feature Sunday dinner dancing. Johnny Shaw and his orchestra play from 7:30 until closing time. It's a weekly event for the boys from various local spots to meet and discuss the hits of the week.

At the Shoreham.

The Tolmacks, at the Shoreham's Blue Room, have an interesting bag of tricks this week. Still highlighted for his popular brand of singing is Charles Carlile, who rounds out three weeks of sustained popularity. The songstress you've been hearing about with Barnee's Orchestra is Ruth Karine Boyce, from the Charles (Buddy) Rogers Band.

Lent at the Mayfair means an interesting choice of menus. Chef Everhard has "gone to town" in preparing interesting dishes biweekly for those who abide by Lenten laws.

There is a new restaurant in town with a cocktail lounge. The location is on Fourteenth street and the name, "The Covered Wagon Restaurant." Quality food is the promise and it bids fair to gain quick popularity.

In addition to the popular and glamorous Helen Green at the King Cole Room, you will find Dancing Dan, a whirlwind tap dancer who performs to the musical spell of Eddie Whitsel, accordionist.

The Xi Spi Thi frat and their favorite lassies had an evening session at the Metronome Room a night or two ago, listening and dancing to the springtime melodies featured by the Paul Kain Orchestra.

Frank Gagen's arrangement of "Tipitin" is just about the best heard so far. The place, of course, was the Carlton's Shar-Zad Room.

At Brinkley's there is a policy of no minimum or cover charge. MacCaffray and his orchestra provide music for dancing.

As a final reminder, Milt Davis at the Hotel Hamilton's Rainbow Room provides the friendly atmosphere for that afternoon pickup and cocktail, or for an evening of dancing.

'Ceaseless War' Needed For Liberty, Says Farley

Elizabeth, N. J., March 17 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley tonight declared that in a world whose atmosphere was charged with "threats and counterthreats of bloody battle," the "redeeming powers of liberty, democracy and morality" must wage "ceaseless warfare."

He spoke before a dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't think an actor's necessarily conceited jest because he hires a publicity man to write nice things about him. Pret' near everybody likes to hear nice things said about himself.

One time down home, our worst citizen was arrested for stealin' hogs. When the trial came up, he told the judge he wanted a lawyer to defend him. The judge said "Well, you were caught red-handed and you've already confessed the crime. I can't imagine anything a lawyer could say in your behalf."

The prisoner said "I don't either, judge—that's what I'm curious to hear."

I'll Mow 'im Down Mr. Bergen!

McCARTHY: I'm practically burning up, Bergen. That fussy fashion plate is actually poking fun at my sartorial elegance.

BERGEN: Not that, Charlie! You mean he's actually criticizing your appearance?

McCARTHY: We-e-e-ll . . . not precisely, old fellow, but he told Andrea Leeds (and remind me to tell you how lusciously lovely she is in the "Goldwyn Follies") . . . ah! a heavenly dream . . . Oh, yes, Bergen, Menjou told Andrea that my clothes fit me like the cover on an ironing board.

BERGEN: Now, Charlie, Menjou may be right. You know he's considered one of the screen's best-dressed men. After all, even your best friends couldn't mistake you for Johnny Weismuller . . . or even Phil Baker.

McCARTHY: Let's leave Tarzan and that accordion-playing gigolo out of this. I'm having enough woe as it is. Besides, I'm astounded to see you take sides with that Meticulous Moocher Menjou against me.

BERGEN: I don't think you should talk so disrespectfully about Mr. Menjou. Remember he's your senior.

McCARTHY: Senior or Freshman, Bergen, I'll mow him down.

BERGEN: I caution you against such vicious tactics, Charlie. Adolphe may have called you only a splinter in the ladder of success, but you must admit that in "The Goldwyn Follies" he is much nicer to you than he is to The Ritz Brothers, Kenny Baker, Helen Jepson, Zorina and all the other important stars. Adolphe's your friend, Charlie.

BERGEN: Calm down, my wooden wonder. Why not take Menjou's advice and see if you can't actually improve your personal appearance. Why not change your tailor, or better still, try one of these new . . .

McCARTHY: Hold it, Bergen, hold it! You're not permitted, you know, to mention any clothing on this program. But maybe your sponsor wouldn't mind if you whispered it to me.
